Apollo Astronauts Explore Moon

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo 15 astronauts David R. Scott and James B. Irwin took a two-hour, bouncing motor trip Saturday to the brink of a canyon and the dusty base of a moon mountain. Then they made plans for a new mountain exploration Sunday.

In all, the Apollo explorers spent six hours and 13 minutes walking and riding over the lunar surface, rock-hunting in the lunar dust, and setting up experiments. Scott first set foot on the lunar soil at 9:30 a.m. EDT, the seventh man to do so.

From that time, they worked hard and Scott, who weighs 175 pounds, used up more oxygen from his backpack than expected. Mission Control decided to make Sunday's outing six and a half-hours long instead of the previously planned seven.

Scott was burning up more energy than Irwin, but he is also a more muscular man, heavy in the neck and shoulders. Mission Control gave him his energy-use measurements compiled on the ground from telemetered medical data.

"It's a little higher on riding that expected," Scott said, referring to the energy used in driving their moon buggy, "but its a sporty job to drive and not run into craters. If we get the front steering figured out, it will help."

They discovered at the outset that the front power steering on the Rover was inoperable. It slowed the start of their trip, and it forced them to rely on the back wheels for steering.

Nevertheless, they covered five miles of the lunar surface in one day, more than the 4.1 miles covered by all previous lunar explorers, all of them pedestrians.

"If you guys get in six and a half hours like today's," said astronaut boss Donald Slayton, "nobody's going to complain."

"I can't believe we came over those mountains," Scott said after exploring the foot of the Apennine chain in the Rover. He had flown the lunar lander Falcon over the 15,000foot peaks to a landing Friday.

"We did," crewmate Irwin replied. "This is just a nice beautiful little valley.

The day that began with thrills, ended also in fatigue. While the astonauts labored to load their precious moon samples into Falcon, their breathing came rapidly and noisily over the radio channels.

The moon ride was easy compared to the work they had to do around the base site.

They left Falcon in Rover at 11:19 a.m. EDT and were back at the landing site by 1:32 p.m. Then they set up the seven experiments which will remain on the lunar surface.

They were gleeful during the ride in Rover.

"This is a sporty driving course," laughed Irwin as Scott guided Rover in and out of craters, and around them.

"What a Grand Prix this is,' Scott agreed.

But the more mundane work around the Falcon taxed their energies more severely. They were visibly tired. At one point, trying to pitch away a piece of equipment, Scott stumbled and almost fell in full view of the television camera beaming his picture around the world.

The astronauts had more than 28 minutes of oxygen left when they repressurized their lunar lander. Space agency officials want a safety margin of 30 minutes of oxygen just in case there is trouble repressurizing the lunar lander and sealing its hatch.

Scott also ran into trouble trying to drill two 10-foot holes into the lunar soil for an experiment designed to measure the flow of heat from the interior of the moon. He got one hole drilled and part of a second when Mission Control told him to finish the job Sunday.

"The fact we can't drill down easily is an important data point," officials said later. "We may be going into bedrock." But then no one is sure that there is such a thing such as bedrock under the lunar surface."

When they returned to the Falcon, they found a loose nozzle on a bacteria filter in a water gun they use for drinking and water was running out of it "in a steady stream."

Ground control said a total of about 25 pounds of water had been lost but emphasized that the loss would not affect the mission, that enough remains "by a comfortable margin."

At 8:30 p.m. EDT, Scott and Irwin were wished good night and settled down to a needed sleep.

The highlight of the day was the buggy ride to Hadley Rille, the great lunar canyon, and to the base of Hadley Mountain, and the craters that lie there.

The astronauts, who landed on the moon Friday, drove along the edge of the mile-wide, 1,200 foot-deep canyon called Hadley Rille to the craters called Elbow and St. George on the slopes of Hadley Mountain rising some 12,000 feet above them.

They beamed the whole adventure back to earth on remarkably clear color television as their words conveyed the excitement and wonder.

"It's breathtaking out here," said Irwin. "Boy, this is beautiful."

"As I stand here in the wonders of unknown Hadley," Scott said almost reverently, "I sort of realize there's a fundamental truth to nature. Man must explore. This is exploration at its greatest."

Irwin had some trouble climbing out of the tight hatch with his heavy life-support system on his back.

Hospital Locking Entrance

The emergency room entrance to Bothwell Hospital will be locked from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. as a security measure beginning Monday, hospital administrator Don Feeback has announced.

Feeback said the decision to secure the emergency door on Thompson Ave. was made after a thief rifled and ransacked a metal cabinet in emergency room number two and escaped with an undisclosed quantity of narcotic drugs Dec. 10, 1970.

The new security system consists of a remote locking device, a buzzer and a two-way speaker system.

Those wishing to gain entrance to the emergency room will have to alert the switchboard operator by pressing the buzzer. The operator will respond on the speaker and will unlock the door after the persons states his need for entrance.

Police Chief William Miller said he had discussed such a system with Feeback at the time of the drug theft and approved of the new action. Feeback said the system components took quite a while in arriving, explaining the long delay in installation.

Police questioned a number of persons in the drug theft, but there were few leads and no arrests were made. The narcotics were not recovered.

Since last December there have been no further thefts reported by the hospital, Chief Miller said, but he has had calls about unauthorized persons seen in hospital corridors late at night.

Assistant administrator Ray Jiedel said the move was "simply a security measure so we can control traffic in that area late at night." He added that the main front entrance will still be open 24-hours daily and that all "non-emergency visitors" should use that entrance.

For Deadline

Viet Cong Offer Identities

PARIS (AP) — The Viet Cong has promised for the first time to identify all its U.S. war prisoners as soon as the United States sets a deadline for the total withdrawal of its troops from Vietnam.

The undertaking was given by the Viet Cong foriegn minister, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, in an interview with The Associated Press Friday.

She also sharply criticized William J. Porter, newly appointed chief U.S. negotiator at the Paris peace talks, for what she called the "unheard-of-savagery" of the pacification program in South Vietnam under his direction.

Mrs. Binh declined during the 75-minute interview in her suburban residence to comment directly on President Nixon's attempt to improve U.S. relations with China. But she said that insofar as Nixon wants to engage the Chinese leaders in a discussion of a Vietnam settlement, his forthcoming trip to Peking will be pointless.

She accused the Nixon administration of ignoring the seven-point peace plan she presented to the Paris talks on July 1, and said outgoing U.S. negotiator David K. E. Bruce indulged in "time-wasting maneuvers" to avoid serious discussion of the plan. The first of the seven points, which she said could be implemented separately, calls for a total U.S. withdrawal by Dec. 31, together with step-by-step release of military and civilian prisoners held by both sides.

Asked why the Viet Cong— unlike Hanoi—has never published a list of its American prisoners, Mrs. Binh replied: "If Mr. Nixon wants to settle the problem of the prisoners, he only needs to set a deadline for the withdrawal of his troops.

"Then he will have not only the list, he will have their liberation."

She was asked whether the Viet Cong intended to produce a list of the American prisoners as soon as a withdrawal date was announced.

"Yes, this is certain," she replied.

U.S. officials said their latest figures, now a month old, indicate that 591 American servicemen are missing in South Vietnam, many of them assumed to be held in Viet Cong prison camps in the jungles along the Vietnamese-Cambodian border. The total includes a score of Americans who disappeared in Cambodia during the U.S. incursion there last year.

Through intelligence and other sources, the United States has firm information that eight or nine of the nearly 600 missing in action in South Vietnam were captured alive. Nothing is known of the fate of the remainder. Hanoi published a list last December of the 339 American prisoners it claims to hold. The United States lists 783 airmen missing over North Vietnam. The Viet Cong has never explained its failure to publish a similar list.

Mrs. Binh's voice took on a hard edge when she turned to Porter, who is due to take over the U.S. delegation in late August.

Porter, until now ambassador to South Korea, served as deputy ambassador in Saigon from mid-1965 to 1967 and was in charge of the pacification program seeking to eliminate the Viet Cong political "infrastructure."

"We know something about Mr. Porter," Mrs. Binh said. "He dealt with the pacification plan and political questions, and I can tell you that the Vietnamese people consider the pacification program to have been conducted with military and political means of unheard-of savagery. This is what we know about Mr. Porter."

She was asked whether she held Porter personally responsible for any excesses of the pacification program.

"What we know of Mr. Porter is that as long as he directed this policy he was responsible for it," she replied.

Bruce's replacement by Porter had little significance for the peace talks, she added.

"What is important is the policy of President Nixon. For the moment, he is using all possible means to gain time."

Mrs. Binh was asked to comment on Nixon's trip to Peking, which the President described as "a major development in our efforts to build a lasting peace in the world."

"We have heard Mr. Nixon speak of peace many times," she said. "Everyone knows that whenever he spoke of peace he only prolonged and intensified the war, not only in Vietnam but in Laos and Cambodia as well."

To put an end to the war, Nixon needs only to give a "positive reply" to the seven-point plan, she said.

No Sign of Any Hurry On Reduction of Troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — American policy on a balanced East-West troop reduction in Central Europe is still being formulated, government officials say, and there is no sign of any hurry.

Officials at the White House and the departments of State and Defense say the whole matter of a so-called mutual balanced force reduction — MBFR — is being examined under normal procedures.

The indicated target for establishing an initial MBFR position now is October when the North Atlantic Treaty Organization deputy foreign ministers meet. A complete proposal will be ready for the full-dress ministerial session toward year's end, they said.

The officials said there is no disagreement within the Nixon administration about the concept of troop cuts by both NATO and the Soviet-dominated Warsaw Pact, but that various approaches remain under consideration.

A State Department expert said "we have been committed to this for some time and barring unforeseen developments we will propose some sort of reductions."

He noted that the United States initiated the idea of trimming the military postures of the two opposing alliances some years back and when the Soviet Union indicated interest last spring planning was started.

Specifically, he said, NATO ministers meeting at Lisbon in June decided to seek exploratory talks with the Warsaw Pact on a balanced reduction.

A State Department source said MBFR has been "under intensive study. The homework and analysis have been completed and we are at the brass tacks point of putting the whole thing together. We are on our way."

A Pentagon official said much the same thing, indicating position papers have been sent to the White House outlining various alternatives but not reflecting any major policy disputes.

The State Department official went on to say what President Nixon must still decide "is just how to play the approach," pointing to the strategic arms limitation talks as an example.

There is some maneuvering by advocates of a 5 per cent cut for both sides, against those who maintain 10 per cent reductions should be proposed as the initial force cut.

What MBFR deals with in terms of men is a force of some 1.1 million NATO troops in Western Europe, including 300,000 Americans facing about 1.23 million Warsaw Pact troops.

Increase Spurs Antenna Sales

The announcement that Cablevision, Inc., will increase customer rates by $1 a month apparently has spurred a brisk business in antenna sales in Sedalia.

A Democrat-Capital survey showed that all retail outlets carrying antennas had experienced a marked increase in sales in the past two weeks. In addition, appliance stores which do not sell antennas have recently received an unusually large number of requests for the items.

Cablevision had been seeking a rate increase for several months, but could not secure City Council approval. On July 22 the company announced it would go ahead with a rate hike despite a council ban.

"About 90 per cent of my recent antenna sales have been to people who are quitting the cable," Bill Janis, co-owner of Star TV, 420 West 16th, said. "We were installing an average of about one antenna per week until a couple of weeks ago. Now we are installing three antennas a day," he explained.

"We are doing four or five times the business we normally get at this time of year," Al Reese, vice-president of Radio and Television Supply, 321 East Main, said.

Reese said most of his antenna customers were openly complaining about Cablevision. "What's amazing is that about 70 per cent of the complaints I hear are not about the rate increase but about the quality of the cable reception."

Reese said his company was selling between 36 and 40 antennas per week.

Also experiencing higher antenna sales than usual was Cecil's TV, 700 South Ohio. "The people I've had come in here have been upset with the Cablevision rate increase," said Cleo Cecil, brother of owner Gerald Cecil.

Cecil noted the present sales rate at his store was about equal to the normal September sales. Antenna dealers do their best business in September when the new television programs begin, Cecil said.

Report Contract Extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — President I. W. Abel of the AFL-CIO United Steelworkers Union said Saturday night he had given the steel industry another 24 hours to come up with a contract settlement that would avoid the first nationwide steel industry strike in 12 years.

The decision, approved over some opposition by other steel workers officials, moved the Saturday midnight strike deadline for 350,000 steelworkers, to Sunday midnight.

Asked whether the extension indicated the union and nine major steel firms were close to a contract agreement, Abel said: "We feel we might be."

"There were some fellows who felt we shouldn't extend, and that we should strike now," Abel told a news conference. But he said the vote to extend the contracts for one more day was unanimous.

The action was taken by a conference of 600 local union officials empowered to call a strike or approve a contract proposal.

Abel declined to give details of the industry's latest contract offer, which was reported to include the key union demand for unlimited cost of living protection.

And he declined to say how far the steel industry's offer fell short of contracts the union has already won for its members in copper, aluminum and can manufacturing, providing wage hikes of 30 per cent or more over three years.

Abel said Secretary of Labor J.D. Hodgson and Director J. Curtis Counts of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service had asked a 48-hour extension.

"I quite frankly thought that 24-hours ought to be sufficient," Abel said.

The White House reportedly was concerned about the effects of a big wage settlement or a strike would have on the nation's economy, already troubled by major strikes in the railroads and other industries.

Abel said he expected negotiations with the steel industry's bargaining committee, headed by R. Heath Larry of U.S. Steel Corp., to continue Sunday.

He scheduled another meeting of the union's steel industry conference for 8 p.m. Sunday and said that "hopefully" negotiators would have a contract proposal to present to the meeting.

Union leaders had indicated before Saturday's announcement that extension of the strike deadline was unlikely.

An all-night Friday bargaining session boosted the offer of nine big steel firms from their original proposal which a union official described as "stingy" and unacceptable."

After the reported improvement in the industry's proposal, one source said "it could still go either way"—either a settlement or a strike.

However, the air of cautious optimism visibly increased.

Vice President Joseph P. Molony of the AFL-CIO United Steelworkers earlier had said one major stumbling block had been removed with the industry's tentative agreement to unlimited cost-of-living pay protection for workers.

The Saturday report of a higher industry offer caused the union to delay a meeting of its 600-member conference of local union officials who will either approve a contract or call the nation's first industrywide strike in a dozen years.

The White House was keeping close tabs on the talks in concern over the impact of a strike on the nation's economy.

Resigning AEC Head Discusses Atomic Energy For Peace

Editor's Note: After a decade of heading the Atomic Energy Commission, Glenn T. Seaborg is resigning to return to his professorship at the University of California, Berkeley. In the following article, written especiallynfor the Associated Press, the Nobel prize winner discusses the future of atomic energy for peaceful purposes.

By GLENN T. SEABORG
Chairman,
Atomic Energy Commission
For the Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — I have been asked what lies ahead for nuclear energy and what my concerns might be for its future development to meet our energy needs.

Let me begin by stressing those needs. Contrary to much that is being said today—and notwithstanding much that we might do to use our energy more efficiently and wisely—we are going to use an enormous amount of that energy in the years and decades ahead. In particular we are going to see an increasing demand for electricity which is our most versatile means of using energy and can be our cleanest.

The reasons for this continued growth of electric power are inevitably tied to our growing population, the rising expectation of that population—particularly those of it for whom the American Dream is still far from a reality—and the need of more, not less, power to clean up our environment and keep it that way.

I have no doubts that nuclear power will be needed to supply an increasing share of our electric power. For environmental, economic and energy resources reasons we simply will not be able to get along without this shift toward nuclear power. And it must be a well-planned and well-managed transition in which the highest priority is given to environmental and safety considerations.

I believe that at present we are pursuing such a transition.

Of course there has been criticism of the development of nuclear power—some of it justified—but all things considered, our advances in nuclear energy have been remarkable. And it is indeed unfortunate that many who are critical of the atom do not understand it better and do not evaluate it on a comparative basis with other sources of energy.

Future developments in the nuclear energy field will not be without much hard work to meet and master technical challenges. But I feel that at the moment the major problems facing the nuclear field are more sociological, psychological and economic than they are scientific or technical.

For one thing, recognition of our environmental problems has made us a nation of people overly suspicious of new growth, technical innovation and the need to develop any technology that carries with it a small potential risk. We have, as I have often stated recently, become "environmentally uptight" and have failed to realize we must accept some risks to achieve the far greater benefits that will accrue to society as a result.

We must also take the positive approach of working towards the reduction of those risks through constant upgrading of our work and innovations in our technologies, rather than merely letting the thoughts of those risks—all the "what if's" and disaster predictions we hear today—freeze us into paralyzing inaction.

Ours is a dynamic technological society in which inaction and lack of innovation are the worst risks of all. This does not mean we must generate and apply the best rational thought and action to control and direct those forces already in motion due to human activity and its interaction with our environment.

In addition to the sociological and psychological problems involved in nuclear matters today we face the problem of reorientation in our economic thinking—and this applies not only to nuclear power and electricity but to so many other aspects of our technological society.

History shows that few if any developments of importance to the human race were "economic" at their inception or for some time to follow. And today we realize that much of the costs of the social and industrial growth we have viewed as economic were taken out of the hide of the environment.

Today we know we must rectify this situation. We must, at considerable cost, buy back a healthy environment and we must do this at the same time that we advance our man-made, urban-industrial environment.

This is directly related to the cost of energy and particularly to the cost of electricity which has always been considered an energy "bargain."

If we are going to generate the large amounts of electricity we will need in the future—regardless of which resources we us—and do so with a minimum impact on our environment the cost of electricity is bound to rise.

This will be true in order to clean up fossil fuels, to assure the safest and most efficient use of nuclear resources, to reduce the thermal effects of all power generation, to site plants in more acceptable locations and to manage the long-distance transmission of their electricity in a more efficient and aesthetic manner.

The public must realize that it is going to be expensive, for example, to desulphurize coal and oil, to gassify coal, to develop untapped energy sources such as geothermal heat and solar energy and new conversion systems such as MHD, to site plants at coastal "power parks" or on off-shore islands, if this proves feasible, and to place high-voltage transmission cable underground.

It is also going to be costly to carry out the necessary developments in the nuclear field to see the success of a commercial breeder reactor and eventually full-scale controlled fusion.

Our most immediate need is to move ahead rapidly to the commercial introduction of the Liquid Metal-Cooled Fast Breeder Reactor (LMFBR). Such a timely introduction of this type of nuclear system will have widespread advanatages—in many ways it will be essential to our overall energy picture.

The LMFBR will effect tremendous efficiencies in the use of our natural nuclear fuels, it will reduce the environmental and thermal effects of nuclear power and it will significantly reduce the cost of nuclear power as we approach an era—the turn of the century—when supplies of fossil fuels will be much tighter and perhaps more than half of the nation's primary energy source will be going into the generation of electricity.

The government and private industry will have to share the cost of breeder development—to bring our breeder program, already making great strides, to its successful fruition.

Beyond this, of course, is the hope that we will eventually see controlled fusion first be proved feasible in our laboratory and then be advanced through the necessary development stages to become a full-scale commercial source of power.

When this happens we will have achieved the ultimate source of power able to supply man's needs for millions of years. But unfortunately, this achievement is not "just around the corner" as some would have use believe.

In my opinion, it may be 30 years or more before controlled fusion will be developed to the point where it is our major source of power. And this is one reason why we must have breeder reactors on the line. To gamble either on the major use of fossil fuels or the full-scale success of controlled fusion could lead us into a global energy crisis of incredible proportions.

In the years to come, we must move ahead wisely with an overall energy plan that considers all aspects of energy growth — natural resources, technological possibilities, social and economic factors, environmental demands and human needs.

Energy — an enormous amount of it—is going to be essential to our survival and we are going to have to devote our best talent and considerable effort and resources to making it available where and when we need it and in ways compatible with other needs of life. I am confident that we can—and will—be able to succeed in this difficult task.

I am grateful for the opportunity I have had to play a small role in the development of nuclear energy. I will look forward to—and continue to work toward—its future development, for I think we have seen only the beginning of the Nuclear Age.

Teenager Wants To Change Reputation

Dear Ann Landers: I have a serious problem which is very hard to face, but I'll try. I'm a 16-year-old girl, and you could rightfully call me a tramp. I don't want to make any excuses for myself, but I really didn't know what I was doing. I started to go with guys when I was awfully young — twelve, to be exact. I wanted to be grown up and popular so I did everything the boys asked me to do. Naturally, my reputation is like dirt.

I am sick of this kind of life and I know it leads to the gutter. But how does a girl let people know she has changed? When I'm with a guy and he tries something and I tell him "NO," he says, "Put that show on the road. I've heard all about you." Sometimes I get so disgusted I think, "Oh, well, what's the use of trying to be decent? Nobody believes me. I'm finished."

Is the only solution to move to a far-away city where nobody knows me? I can't leave here for at least two more years and even then I wouldn't know where to go. Please help me. — Trapped By The Past.

Dear T.: Moving away is no answer. My advice is to start where you are — with what you have. I suggest a new approach to life, based on what you've learned. Please DO change, and in time the word will get around. For a girl to consider herself finished at 16 because she's made some foolish mistakes makes no sense. Remember — you didn't get your reputation in one week, and you can't change it in one week. Be patient. You WILL achieve your goal if you stick with it.

Dear Ann Landers: Why didn't you clobber that ignoramus in Shaker Heights who was upset because her friend bragged to everyone that her daughter was marrying a doctor — and it turned out he was "only a dentist!"

Too often people say "my doctor" instead of "my pediatrician, my dentist, my ophthalmologist or my psychiatrist." When I hear "doctor" used in a general way I suspect at once that the person does not know the correct name of the specialty.

The doctorate degree is conferred on many who are outside the field of medicine. Most clergymen are doctors of divinity. Many professors have earned a doctorate in philosophy, English literature, psychology, political science and a host of other disciplines.

Our two sons are dentists. To suggest that they are not really doctors is an insult to a fine profession. — Also From Ottawa.

Dear Also: Thank you — and I also want to thank the other mothers of dentists who wrote. There were dozens. Right on, Moms!

Dear Ann Landers: I recently met a fascinating woman. She is not only very good looking but she possesses the fantastic ability to see into the future and foretell events. People who have known her for years say she has always had this gift of clairvoyance. She had related some amazing stories which prove that she does indeed have extrasensory perception.

Yesterday she suggested we go on a trip together. The deal is that I would pay her expenses to the famous gambling casinos of the world, put up all the money and we'd split the winnings. We could go to Monte Carlo, Paris and Las Vegas for $3,000. If she is as good as I think she is, we could make ten times that amount. — Ay Or Nay In Philadelphia.

Dear Phil: If she had these supernatural powers, what would she need you for, Dummy?

Heart Disease Rate Increase Is Noted

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Heart disease has risen proportionately as the cause of deaths in the St. Louis metropolitan area during the past decade, the Bi-State Regional Medical Program reported Friday.

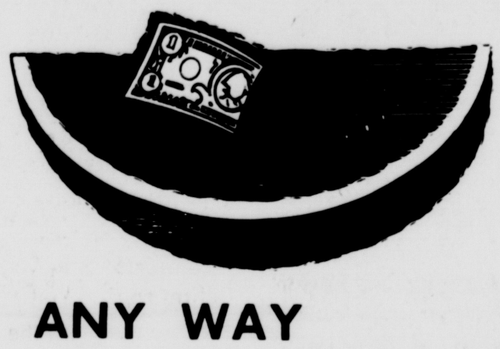

In 1969, the agency said, heart disease accounted for 38.5 per cent of all deaths in the area, a 6 per cent increase from 1960.

Figures compiled by the agency also showed an increase in deaths proportionately from cancer and a decrease proportionately from strokes.

The area listed as metropolitan St. Louis includes city and county plus St. Charles and Jefferson counties in Missouri and St. Clair, Madison and Monroe counties in Illinois.

Big Deficit

Dismal Economic Picture

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is on the way to piling up the worst back-to-back deficits in federal government operations since 1945-46.

But administration officials shrug off the two deficits, expected to total more than $40 billion in fiscal 1971 and 1972, saying they are fiscally responsible.

The reason, they say, is that the budget spending is pegged to the amount of tax revenues the government would expect to receive in times of high prosperity.

In fiscal 1945, the federal deficit, ballooned by wartime spending, was $45 billion. As peace returned, the deficit dropped to $18 billion the following year.

The Treasury Department reported Wednesday the deficit for fiscal 1971, which ended June 30, climbed to $23.2 billion, second highest one-year deficit of the post-World War II era.

Officially, the White House says, the deficit for fiscal 1972 will be $11.6 billion. But already administration officials have acknowledged publicly it will be closer to $18.6 billion.

The largest back-to-back deficits in the past 25 years were those in fiscal 1967 and 1968 when President Lyndon B. Johnson was in office.

But the Nixon deficits are more responsible than those, say administration officials, including Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, a Democrat and close political associate of Johnson.

The fiscal 1971 budget actually showed a $2.5-billion surplus on a full-employment basis, Connally and George P. Shultz, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said. It was the third year in a row a full-employment balance or surplus has been achieved.

"This record is in sharp contrast to that of fiscal years 1966 through 1968, when full-employment deficits totaled more than $40 billion," they said.

Full employment is defined as a 4-per-cent jobless rate. The unemployment rate during the fiscal year averaged 5.7 per cent—and got bigger as the year went along.

As the federal budget floundered deeper in the red, so did the nation's trade position.

In June, the Commerce Department said, the nation recorded its third straight monthly deficit in trade, with imports exceeding exports by $363 million, raising the figure for the first six months of the year to $373 billion. This was the first time this had happened in the 25 years the government has been keeping trade figures on a seasonally adjusted basis.

Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans says the balance could drop to zero this year for the first time since 1893.

Says Chances For Peace Much Better

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has commended President Nixon for his planned trip to China, but ran into some verbal difficulties along the way.

Offering the President only support, not "full faith and support," the panel nevertheless determined the mission is "outstanding."

For reasons as murky as the secret diplomacy that arranged the Nixon trip, the committee Friday rewrote, not once but twice, a resolution commending the President for the planned journey.

In the morning, the panel dropped the word "outstanding" from a resolution proposed by the Senate leaders, Republican Hugh Scott and Democrat Mike Mansfield.

In the afternoon, the committee reconsidered and put it back. So the measure sent to the Senate resolves that Nixon "is hereby commended for his outstanding initiative in furtherance of the foreign relations of the United States and world peace by deciding to undertake 'a journey for peace' to the People's Republic of China."

The morning version referred to the trip simply as a journey; the afternoon edition reinstated the use of Nixon's own description of the trip's peace goal.

A committee official said the last rewrite came after some members, apparently including Scott, read news accounts of the morning changes.

Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., said after the first rewrite session the changes were "more a matter of style than anything else."

But Scott, for one, saw them as more than that, and issued a statement after the rewrite was rewritten, saying he was pleased the final version incorporated Nixon's "journey for peace" phrase.

Dedication Ceremony Held For New Dam

CENTERVILLE, Iowa (AP) — President Nixon dedicated the new $2-billion Rathbun Dam and Reservoir in this rural community Saturday and said his administratation is determined to revitalize the American countryside.

He also made a pitch for his revenue-sharing programs, saying that towns like Centerville and its four surrounding counties would benefit from these funds for rural development, education, transportation, law enforcement and manpower.

Nixon pointed out that Iowa's first-year share of general revenue-sharing funds would be more than $74 million.

"We must restore the farmer to his rightful place of prosperous production and fair share of America's increasing prosperity," the President said.

The President hailed the building of Rathbun Lake, the world's largest manmade lake, as a "classic example of the way American resourcefulness converts problems into opportunities. Instead of river floods, you now have the benefit of this dam and reservoir with the all recreational and economic possibilities they open up."

The dam and reservoir were built in the Chariton River Valley by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Nixon explained his acceptance of the invitation to come here for the dedication. "To me there is nothing more important than keeping our rural areas and their people right in the American mainstream."

He flew here from Canton, Ohio, where he joined Friday in a salute to seven gridiron greats being enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Question
What does a funeral cost?
Answer
Children have a riddle, "How long is a piece of string?" Asking what a funeral costs is certainly not a riddle but it requires an understanding of terms. Quite often a funeral does not cost the survivors anything from their own funds. Burial benefits from the Veterans Administration or Social Security or workmen's Compensation or some phase of a state welfare program may be utilized to defray the cost. Frequently people make a pre-need deposit with us for their funeral service and, when this is done, there is no cost to the survivors.
In those instances where there are no funeral benefits, people who ask this question are vitally concerned with what their cost after death will be or what they will be called upon to pay for someone else. Since we recognize our moral responsibility to serve all people we will always have funeral services within the financial means of everyone.

Volume Will Include Several Sedalia Men

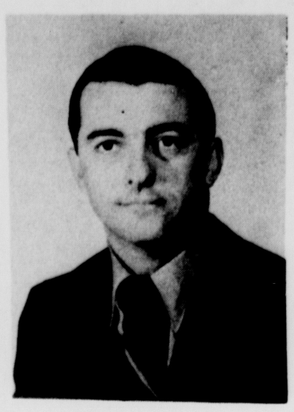

Adam Fischer

Jim Hurst

Bob Wiley

Keith Rowland

Charles Lawrence

Six young Sedalia area men will be included in the 1971 edition of Outstanding Young Men of America, according to Joseph Doggett, president of the Sedalia Jaycees.

Selected on the basis of their professional and community leadership were Chuck Lawrence, Paul Culp, Jr., Keith Rowland, Jim Hurst, Bob Wiley and Adam Fischer.

Sponsored by leading men's civic and service organizations the OYMA volume honors men between 21 and 35 whose demonstrated excellence has marked them for future leadership in the nation.

President Nixon, complimenting the awards volume, has said, "Outstanding Young Men of America presents a most fitting testimonial not only to the success of many of our young people, but also to their awareness of the debt which they owe our free society."

Nominations for the awards volume are submitted each year by various civic organizations, college alumni associations and military commandants.

Lawrence, manager of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, has been active in the Jaycees and Kiwanis Club. Culp is a farmer in the Smithton area and was named by the Sedalia Jaycees as the Outstanding Young Farmer of 1971.

Rowland, an active Jaycee, is employed by Interstate Studios. He is currently serving the Missouri Jaycees as regional vice president. Hurst is also active in the Jaycees and the Optimist Club. He has served as president of the Little League Football board and is an insurance agent.

Wiley is currently serving with the U.S. Army in Ft. Belvoir, Va. While in Sedalia he was active in the Jaycees and was named outstanding board member of the chapter for last year.

Fischer, Pettis County prosecuting attorney, has served as president of the Sedalia Jaycees and is active in many civic and political organizations.

Division Activity Curtailed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A continuing money shortage has forced the state Division of Mental Health to skip its usual transfer of about 200 mental hospital patients a month to nursing homes.

Ed Davis, the division's director of the nursing home program, said about 847 mental patients already are in nursing homes but they're being reclassified.

So far, 132 of the 194 examined have been reclassified as eligible for only $125 a month in Medicaid toward nursing home care instead of the potential maximum of about $320.

An effort will be made Sept. 1 to adjust the payments with the Mental Health Division picking up the difference because many of the mental patients have been in nursing homes for years.

"It would be unthinkable to put them back in the hospital," Davis said.

Nursing home operators have not received a payment increase on state patients for about two years, yet their operating costs have continued to rise.

He estimated about $700,000 of the Mental Health Division's total appropriation would be needed to keep the nursing home program going even with no new referrals.

Hammers Nails To Set Record

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO. (AP) — A Cape Girardeau man wants to know if he set a world's record recently by pounding ten pounds of 16-penny nails into a two-inch-thick pine board.

Rodger Rogers said Friday he accomplished the feat in just over half an hour — to be exact, 38 minutes and five seconds.

He said he did the hammering to prove to friends he is an accomplished carpenter.

Rogers and his buddies sent the nail pounding time to the Guiness Book of Records in London, England, to see if it will stand as a world record.

Credit Unions Serve Useful Purpose

By ROBERT H. TARBELL
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

To the layman, the term "credit union" can be both ambiguous and confusing. In reality, however, these miniature finance groups perform what is considered an important function in the economic life-stream of a community.

That, at any rate, is the general opinion of the managers of the five credit unions operating in Sedalia. They point with considerable pride to the fact that their combined assets total $546,231.45 and that 1,337 workers in the city actively participate in the organizations.

Credit unions serve functions comparable to banks in that they accept savings accounts and make loans to members. Each member is usually an employe of the company which permits a credit union to operate, but without official participation. The business of most credit unions is conducted mostly during noon hours to avoid interference with the normal production schedules.

The five Sedalia credit unions are: Pittsburgh-Corning Credit Union, founded in 1952, $156,000 in current assets and 250 members; Utili-Com Credit Union, 1970, $20,000, 170 members; Town and Country Credit Union, 1950, $292,231.45, 365 members; Rival Manufacturing Co. Credit Union, 1968, $42,000, 300 members; Missouri-Pacific Railroad Co. Credit Union, 1952, $36,000, 252 members.

Lou W. Satorius, 516 West Sixth, a board member of the Missouri Credit Union League, said the main function of a credit union is to enable members to attain shareholder status in the credit union. An average share amounts to $5, which is used as a deposit.

Satorius said the Missouri Credit Union League acts as the governing agent of credit unions throughout the state.

What sets credit unions apart from banks, and savings and loan companies and similar organizations is the wide use of payroll deductions, which can be made for a savings plan, to pay off a loan, or both, Satorius said.

Interest rates on loans amounts to 1 per cent of the unpaid balance per month, Satorius said. He commented that the true rate is closer to 6.625 per cent a year if a borrower repays the loan on a regular basis.

Jim Anderson, 1419 South Ohio, treasurer for the Town and Country Credit Union, said his organization was the only federally-chartered credit union in Sedalia.

Anderson explained that the major difference between his and state-chartered credit unions is a tighter audit procedure required by the Federal Bureau of Credit Unions.

Like all financial institutions, credit unions sometimes lose money. Anderson said that his credit union had made loans totaling $3,945,171 since 1955. Of that amount, only $9,603 has not been repaid, he said.

Mrs. R. C. Emery, 1916 West Fourth, who runs the credit union at the Missouri-Pacific Shops, operates from her home. She said the main function she performs is keeping the credit union's books, while actual loan and deposit procedures originate with the credit union committee at the Missouri-Pacific Shops.

A. A. Taylor, Route 2, controller, at Rival Manufacturing Co., acts as manager for the credit union there. Its newness and limited assets restrict the size of loans. Since its first year of operation with assets of $6,500, the credit union has managed to increase its available cash $42,000 by 1971.

The newest and smallest credit union in Sedalia is Utili-Com. It has assets of $20,000 after being in business just over one year. Its main membership is composed of employes of Missouri Public Service Co. The credit union also serves other utility companies outside of Sedalia, however. Membership and application procedures are handled by Mrs. Jerri Newby, Route 3, who acts as treasurer.

Each credit union manager said the unions were morale boosters. Of special benefit, they said, was the fact that credit unions could grant loans in a relatively short time. Emergency loans, according to some credit union officials, could be approved in as little as 15 minutes to a half hour. Insurance programs, they said, helped gain more attention for the unions and made them more attractive to employes.

In 1970 Sweden placed orders for parts totaling $2.5 million for nuclear power stations in Ringhals, Oskarshamm and Barseback.

Girl Says She Is Spoiled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anne Shelly says she's a spoiled teenage brat who always gets her way.

When her left arm was severed by an airplane propeller July 22, she knew it would be saved.

"I wanted my arm and I have it," she says.

Miss Shelly, who celebrated her 16th birthday Saturday, is in Orthopaedic Hospital recovering from surgery to restore the arm which involved sewing together four major nerve sheaths. Ann's arm was severed four inches below the shoulder.

"I've never been sick," she said in an interview. "Being sick is a waste of time. I have no bad feelings. It happened. It's fixed. That's about it."

The Sherman Oaks girl, who said she was sure the night of the accident that her arm would be saved, credits her confidence to a faith in God.

"I have always considered myself a sort of spoiled brat because I've always gotten what I want."

Anne, daughter of a television writer, was with a friend at Van Nuys Airport who was showing her a plane.

"I walked into the propeller," she says. "It was night and I couldn't see it. If you're around horses you don't walk behind them and if you know anything about planes you don't walk into propellers."

The friend, Davis Lasky, 18, had taxied the aircraft down the runway and Anne got out of the plane.

Doctors say it could be two years before they can determine the success of the surgery. "Nerves can grow at a rate of an inch a month," said Dr. Kenneth Head. "The nerves must regenerate. How completely they do so will determine how much movement she will have in the arm and fingers."

Lockheed Loan Approved

By JOHN BECKLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, scrapping a bill that would guarantee $2 billion in loans to ailing corporations, has approved a single $250 million loan guarantee for Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

By a cliffhanging 192-189 vote, the House Friday night passed a compromise bill put together by Republican and Democratic congressional leaders and the administration.

It now goes to the Senate, which is still locked in filibuster on the issue. A third attempt to cutt off debate failed Friday and another effort is planned for Monday.

House leaders expressed hope during debate their bill would provide a break in the Senate impasse, but the close vote blurred the effect of the action.

Conservatives and liberals in both parties joined forces against the loan guarantee, the conservatives denouncing it as an assault on the free enterprise system and the liberals as a welfare program for big business.

Supporters of the legislation hit hard on the loss of jobs that would result if Lockheed was forced to drop the commercial TriStar jet airliner project the loan is designed to finance.

Voting for the bill were 102 Democrats and 90 Republicans. Voting against it, 129 Democrats and 60 Republicans.

The leadership had little trouble winning approval of amendments that trimmed the broad, $2 billion loan proposal into a Lockheed-only bill, and were predicting easy passage before the roll call began.

But as the "ayes" and "nays" rang out in equal numbers the usually noisy chamber grew quiet and party whips began scurrying about to round up absent members and talk to any others who were still undecided.

When the last name had been called the bill trailed 182-181, but House rules permit members who failed to answer their names to vote at the Speaker's desk and the margin of victory for the leadership was eked out there.

Although the bill authorizes only the $250 million loan guarantee Lockheed is seeking, it sets up the machinery for loans to other corporations that is contained in the $2 billion version.

No other loans could be made without congressional action, however.

The bill also provides that the government, as the chief risk taker in the transaction, would get a larger share of the profits than the banks.

It was the banks that came in for the hardest criticism by opponents of the legislation. Noting banks refused to make the loan without a guarantee of repayment because of the risk involved, Rep. Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y., told the House:

"The banks want to make a sucker out of us and we ought not to let them do it."

Will Honor Sen. Skelton At A Dinner

(Democrat-Capital Service)

JEFFERSON CITY — State Senator Ike Skelton will be honored at a testimonial dinner in Lexington Sept. 1.

Senate Majority Leader William J. Cason, Clinton, is chairman of the event and Wally Hulver, Lexington, is in charge of the arrangement.

Senator Cason said "Ike Skelton is one of Missouri's finest young state senators and has made an outstanding record in the past session. I know that many people from Ike's district and from all parts of Missouri will want to join in this well-deserved tribute."

Commend President For Plan

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — President Nixon says America's chances for an era of peace are better "than at any time in the century" and has urged Americans to keep their country "No. 1 in the world."

The President made the remarks Friday night at a pro football dinner, the first stop on a two-day Midwestern swing that took him Saturday to Centerville, in southern Iowa, for the dedication of the $26.5 million Rathbun Dam and world's largest man-made reservoir.

Addressing the football dinner, Nixon declared that this is not the time for Americans to rest on their laurels "and to let other nations that are competing with us pass us by. That we cannot let happen...

"In the spirit of American football at its best," the President said, "Let's always try to be No. 1 . . . let's be for our team, let's be for our country."

The dinner was held as part of a celebration marking the enshrinement of seven football greats in the Professional Football Hall of Fame here.

A chief deputy sheriff of Stark County estimated that a total of 35,000 to 40,000 turned out at the Akton-Canton airport, along the freeways, downtown streets and at the Hall of Fame, where Nixon toured amid the momentoes and exhibits of gridiron greats.

Sudan Activity Is Denounced by Reds

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union Saturday denounced what it called a "bloody reign of terror" in Sudan and execution of Sudanese Communists in the wake of an unsuccessful pro-Communist coup on July 19.

A statement by the official news agency Tass revealed that on July 26 Moscow had also protested against "threats and acts of violence" against Soviet diplomats in Khartoum, the Sudanese capital.

Tass said the Soviet government's protest, delivered to Sudanese President Jafaar El Numairi by the Soviet ambassador, warned that the present Sudanese course could bring a break in relations between the two countries.

The protest followed an appeal the day before by Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny, who asked Numairi to "abstain from harsh sentences."

Camera Bugs Can Take Moon Shots

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Want to make your own pictures of Apollo 15 moon-landing and the lunar rover's trips over the surface of the moon?

Pictures beamed to earth by astronauts David R. Scott and James B. Irwin during their moon excursions can be copied off the home television screen in their black and white, or color.

For best results, a compur shutter-equipped camera should be used although good results can be obtained from cameras with focal plane shutters.

Most 35mm cameras have focal plane shutters. Compur shutters act like the opening and closing of the iris of the eye. In focal plane shutters a curtain passes across the film opening.

Using high-speed ektachrome, daylight or type B, color film, a camera should be set up on a tripod or table, level with and directly in front of the television screen, at the closest possible focusing distance.

Room lights that reflect on the television screen should be eliminated. Shutter speeds should be at 1-30th of a second with a lens setting of f. 3.5.

Best results for black and white are obtained by using film rated at an ASA of 800, with a shutter speed of 1-30th of a second and a lens setting of f. 4 and f. 5.6.

When using a camera with focal plane shutter, it is advisable to shoot the picture you want as quickly as you see it. If the television screen changes images while the picture is snapped, there is a chance that half the photo will be of the old scene, and half of the new one.

The television screen should be set at its highest contrast and brilliance.

McGovern Directed Ellsberg

NEW YORK (AP) — Presidential aspirant Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., says it was he who suggested that Daniel Ellsberg make the Pentagon papers available to "a respectable newspaper."

One of two announced candidates for the presidential nomination, McGovern is quoted in the Aug. 1 edition of Parade, the Sunday newspaper supplement, as saying:

"What happened is that Mr. Ellsberg came to me and told me that such papers existed . . .

"I told him that I felt as a lawmaker that I could not be in the business of breaking the law, but I did make clear to him that I thought it would serve the public interest if he made those documents available to a respectable newspaper.

"I think Mr. Ellsberg took the proper course when he went to the New York Times. If I had released them, people would have said, 'Well, that's McGovern and his bid for the presidency trying to embarass the executive branch.'

"Now what Mr. Ellsberg has done may well be a breach of the law—we'll have to wait and see—but I anticipate that Mr. Ellsberg is prepared to pay the legal penalty in order to stand on his conscience."

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Two bandits with pistols and a portable radio tuned to the police wave length held up a Milan bank Friday and drove away with 5 million lire ($8,000). Witnesses said the bandits kept listening to the police broadcasts Friday to know how soon their holdup was reported.

Chicago Stockyards Are Closed

CHICAGO (AP) — Livestock handlers nudged the last steer out of the auction pens and the U.S. Department of Agriculture issued its final Chicago livestock report Friday as the storied Union Stockyards became a part of history.

Friday was the last day of trading at the once thriving livestock trading center that moved poet Carl Sandburg to call Chicago "hog butcher for the world."

A victim of economics and progress, the yards were ordered closed by the owner, the Union Stock Yard and Transit Co. of Chicago, after 106 years of uninterrupted trading.

On its final day about 2,000 head of cattle were delivered to the yards for sale, a far cry from former days when daily receipts totaled 20,000 or higher. Thursday's receipts totaled only 100 head.

Stockyards officials estimated about 1.2 billion head of cattle, sheep and swine were traded on the sprawling center on the South Side since Christmas day 1865 when the yards were opened.

Trading has continued uninterrupted for 106 years despite an $8 million fire which all but destroyed the yards in May 1934.

Demise of the trading centers was attributed to dwindling receipts during the last 10 years and the decision of major packers to move their outmoded plants from Chicago's Packingtown to modern facilities closer to the nation's farms and ranches — sources of their supplies.

In the last 10 years the Chicago yards served principally as a shipping center for eastern points. Even that business has dwindled to a point where it too has proved unprofitable.

The hog market was closed in May 1970. Sheep receipts were negligible the last few years and recently none was sent to the market.

With trading in the yards a memory, a wrecking firm is scheduled to move into the area soon to tear down remaining buildings to make way for an industrial park.

Religious Experience For Cyclists

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — Fifteen Indiana youths rode their bicycles through town this week on a cross-country trip designed as an experience in religion.

The Peddlers were organized by Greg Hammel, a 24-year-old history teacher from Columbia City, Ind. They took a bus to California and began riding eastward July 6. The group hopes to reach Ocean City, Md. by Aug. 10.

Hammel said he wanted to give teen-agers an experience in religion not confined to regular worships or projects which the young men might consider childish.

He challenged youngsters to a bike ride across the country as test of their endurance and to allow them to explore faith together.

"We want to learn more about God for we think Jesus can give a person a different perspective of himself," Hammel said.

He got help for the project from his alma mater Huntington College but financed most of the trip himself.

Each rider paid $350 for food, supplies and bicycle and a wardrobe including yellow windbreaker and sweat suit.

Police Dispatcher Fined By Court

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — A suspended Lawrence police dispatcher pleaded guilty Friday to a charge of unlawful disclosure of a warrant. He was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $250.

The offense was committed July 8, a few hours before a drug raid here by local, county and state law enforcement officials. He was on duty at the time.

Wicks was placed on parole by Judge C. C. Rankin of the Douglas County District Court and given until Monday to pay the fine.

A University of Kansas senior from Lebanon, Mo., Wicks had worked for the police department more than a year.

He was originally charged with feloniously obstructing justice, but the charge was dropped by the county attorney's office and Wicks pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charge.

Avoid Battle

Moon Walk Is Not Source For Concern

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Lurton Scott said she not worried about her astronaut husband scurrying around the moon Saturday on the lunar buggy named Rover 1.

"He's a very good driver," she says, "I'd go anywhere with him—even to the moon."

The wife of Apollo 15 commander David R. Scott was all smiles Friday after Scott and James B. Irwin piloted the moonship Falcon to a safe, accurate lunar landing.

"There's just no way to describe it," she said. "It's pretty overwhelming."

"It was a perfect landing," said Mary Irwin. "Just beautiful."

A church teaching commitment prevented Mrs. Irwin from watching all of Saturday's televised moon excursion, the first of three scheduled lunar adventures.

"Jim is committed to his mission and I'm committed to mine," she said.

Mrs. Scott, joined by her two children, Tracy, 10, and Doug, 7, stepped from the Scott home after the landing and exclaimed: "It's a beautiful day!"

A driving rain was falling at the time.

Carson 'Spills Beans'

NEW YORK (AP) — An American agent for the Soviet tourist agency said Friday that TV talk show host Johnny Carson spilled the beans when he mentioned negotiations were being pursued to broadcast the Tonight show from Moscow.

Carson divulged the project Thursday night, during an exchange with actress Claudia Cardinale, who recently made a movie in Russia.

"In his excitement over interviewing Miss Cardinale, Johnny spilled the beans and broke the confidence," said John Lynge, a representative of the ACDM Agency, which represents the Soviet Intourist agency. Lynge said he extended the invitation in behalf of Intourist and Aeroflot, the government airline. He said the Soviet government would pay all expenses for a one or two-week stand later this year or early in 1972.

"It's really premature to say anything about the invitation now because it's still in the discussion stage," Lynge said.

Lynge said Carson was informed of the offer an hour before taping time by Peter Lasalle, associate producer of the NBC-TV program. Lasalle said Thursday that the trip was an "exciting idea" and that it would be further explored when the Tonight Show returns from a three-week engagement in Hollywood starting Monday.

Lynge said Carson's disclosure could "very well jeopardize" negotiations with State Department officials in Washington.

Remains of Ancient Animals Found

(Democrat-Capital Service)

Fourteen winding miles south of Warsaw, in the Breshears Valley, Jim King, a staff member of the University of Arizona, and a group of archeology students recently unearthed the remains of a mastodon believed to have roamed the Benton County area 10,000 years ago.

The beast measured 14 feet in length, is estimated to have been 12 feet high at the fore quarters, 10 feet high in the hind quarters with tusks from six to 10 feet long.

The skeleton has been taken, piece by piece, from a site known to Benton Countians as the "Bone Hole." This area has served as a graveyard for all sorts of creatures from early man to a huge, ancient beaver which weighed in at around 200 pounds when he wondered the spruce forests in this area 12,000 years ago.

According to King, spruce were plentiful before the ice age ended and this area bore a great deal of resemblence to the northern Canada of today.

King's "dig group" is conducting its excavation through the sponsorship of the National Science Foundation, Illinois State Museum and Los Angeles County Museum in what King terms an effort to "try to piece together the climatic changes this country has gone through in the years from the end of the ice age to the present."

The archeologists are achieving this goal by studying fossils, pollen, bits of wood and any other specimen available. Theses can be identified and tested, King stated.

The "Bone Hole" was discovered in 1804 by Professor Barton from the College of Philadelphia during a visit to Benton County. In 1840, a German scientist, Albert Koch, journeyed to Missouri and unearthed several animals remains in the Breshears Valley.

Koch had a flair for theatrics, says King. "He put bones together in odd shapes and manner and created 'monsters,' then charged people admission to see them."

That is how the "Missouri Leviathan" was born. King reports that Koch took the skeleton of a mastodon he discovered in Benton County and moved its leg joints forward and added webbed feet, calling the creation the "Missouri Leviathan."

Koch showed the web footed mastodon at the Chicago World's Fair, with the subtle addition of a four piece band playing in the creature's rib cage.

Ultimately, Koch's creationwas "destroyed" by being restored to its original shape and can be seen today in the British Museum in London.

Koch's diggs and his showmanship stimulated an interest in the "Bone Hole" Many people poured over the area from 1850 to about 1860. However, interest dwindled until the 1960's. In recent years various groups of college students have covered the "Bone Hole" area in search for another "Missouri Leviathan."

Valued Find

Archeologists working south of Warsaw recently uncovered the remains of a mastodon believed to have roamed the Benton County area about 10,000 years ago. Here, one of a group of diggers stands near a tusk measuring about six feet in length.

Two-Year Draft Bill Is Approved

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A two-year draft bill urging President Nixon to negotiate with Hanoi a "final date" for total U.S. withdrawal—but without the Senate's nine-month war deadline—has been approved by House-Senate negotiators.

Antiwar senators immediately set to work trying to oraganize a filibuster to block passage at least until Congress returns from a month-long summer recess in September.

And Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who wrote the controversial nine-month deadline amendment, was expected to decide Saturday whether he would even call the bill up in the Senate before recess begins next Friday.

Senate conferees led by Armed Services Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss., gave into the House negotiators' adamant stand against the deadline breaking a deadlock that has left the nation's draft in limbo a month already.

Previous draft authority expired June 30.

"I realize that at first blush many senators will be displeased," Stennis said.

But he said he believes they will see "much of the philosophy and language" of the Mansfield Amendment is intact and will pass the compromise to meet what he called the "essential need" for draft renewal.

House Armed Services Chairman F. Edward Hebert, D-La., said the conferees upheld House refusal "to tie the President's hands."

He said he expects the House to pass the bill Tuesday and send it to the Senate.

But Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, said he will then filibuster "as long as necessary to prevent reinstatement of the draft." And Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he will urge fellow antiwar senators to join an organized filibuster.

Cranston said he was confident they could prevent the draft from coming to a vote unless Mansfield accepted the compromise and helped invoke cloture to cut off the filibuster.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., a conferee who refused to sign the compromise said "it may get to the Senate but I don't think it will pass."

The compromise urges President Nixon to negotiate with Hanoi a ceasefire and "a final date for the withdrawal from Indochina of all military forces" contingent on Hanoi's release of all American prisoners of war.

It says the negotiated agreement should provide "for a series of phased and rapid" withdrawal of U.S. forces corresponding to release of American prisoners.

The compromise also declares the sense of Congress that all U.S. military operations in Indochina should be terminated "at the earliest practicable date."

Says Nixon Can't Be Named Defendant

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Nixon cannot be named a defendant in a lawsuit over urban renewal funds, a federal judge has ruled.

A suit involving $350 million in urban renewal funds filed by the San Francisco Redevelopment Agency and Public Housing Authority had named the President among several federal officials. It seeks to force release of the funds approved by Congress but ordered withheld by Nixon.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Carter said Friday he could not find that a federal court had powers to compel the chief of the executive branch "to take any action whatsoever."

Consumers Cut Back Purchases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weary of inflation and high unemployment, the nation's consumers have cut back sharply on their plans to make major new purchases this year, the government said Friday.

The Commerce Department survey handed the Nixon administration a setback in its bid to push the economy into higher gear.

The administration has been counting on stepped up consumer spending to accelerate the pace of the economy. But the new support suggested an even further slackening of business activity.

The report, based on a survey taken earlier this month by the Census Bureau, parallels closely private surveys showing a reduction in consumer spending plans for this year.

The Census Bureau said for the first time in several years its survey reflects a drop in the number of households reporting income declines.

But the drop in consumer buying expectations is expected to have more impact on the economy. Consumer spending relies heavily on psychological factors, such as fear of inflation, concern over loss of jobs, and domestic and international events.

Maintain Rehabilitation Program Worth Keeping

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Army officials at Ft. Bragg admit arrests of soldiers on drug charges have doubled over the last two years, but they maintain their drug rehabilitation program is sound and deserves a place in the modern Army.

"If you judge the program on the basis that every person stays off drugs forever, then obviously the program is unsuccessful," said Col. Edgar McGowan, who has over-all authority for "Operation Awareness," Bragg's 1½-year-old drug rehabilitation project.

"However, the answer is yes," the program is successful, he added, "because many have been helped."

McGowan said a continuing survey shows 275 of the 560 soldiers who have gone through the Ft. Bragg program were reported by their commanders as doing "good" or better in their jobs and personal activities.

An Army law enforcement official said there were fewer than 150 soldiers arrested for drug law violations in 1969. However, he said 155 were arrested during the first six months of this year.

The official maintained that despite the increase, the drug problems experienced by Ft. Bragg and nearby Fayetteville are no different than problems faced by other military installations of comparable size and in comparable surroundings.

The officials were questioned in response to charges by Rep. John H. Murphy, D-N.Y., that the Army is not equipped organizationally or psychologically to handle the problem of rehabilitating addicted servicemen.

Murphy said a personal investigation at Ft. Bragg showed there were mass thefts of military property by money-hunting junkies, sales of drugs on base and a sharp increase in drug traffic.

The congressman said he was told by military officials that "half-a-million dollars worth of military equipment was stolen from Ft. Bragg last year, much of which was exchanged for money in local pawn shops in Fayetteville, N.C."

Both McGowan and the law enforcement spokesman admitted that hard drugs such as heroin are available on the sprawling Ft. Bragg reservation. But the law enforcement officer said crackdowns by military and civilian police have made it increasingly hard to obtain drugs.

He verified that around $500,000 worth of property was stolen on the base in 1970, but said only about one-third of it belonged to the government. The rest belonged to soldiers.

The military law enforcement official said many soldiers who steal government property are apprehended through checks of pawn tickets. He said many, "but not most," admit they stole to get money for drugs.

Product of LaMonte

Rolla Orr, a retired carpenter of LaMonte, said he couldn't figure out how this squash bulged so big on a vine which wasn't bigger than any other vines growing in his kitchen garden. The 30-pound pride is a cross between a pink banana squash and a turban squash, he explained. Orr said he might enter it in a contest at the State Fair or "somebody might want some seeds, I don't know." (Democrat-Capital Photo)

Misunderstood Law Abortion Problem

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — A lack of understanding of a new law was probably responsible for illegal abortions performed in four non-accredited hospitals during the last fiscal year, Dr. Edwin D. Lyman, director of the state Department of Health, said Thursday.

"They probably weren't aware of the particulars of the law," Lyman said in an interview. "I've had enough experience in dealing with health laws to know there is a lot of room for misunderstanding."

Lyman said the state Board of Health is not pressing for legal action against the hospitals, although the board has turned information over to the attorney general's office that the four had abortions performed in them during the law's first fiscal year which ended June 30.

"There is no reason to suspect any hospital is trying to get away with anything in this area that is beyond the law," Lyman said.

"It all came to light because these hospitals filed reports. You don't ordinarily go around reporting to a governmental agency if you're trying to hide something."

Both Lyman and the attorney general's office said they do not believe the problem is widespread.

"There might be one or two others besides what we've had reported, who have done it and not reported it," Lyman said. "There is really no way of finding that out."

The new Kansas law allows abortions when a panel of three physicians agrees that the health of the mother or child is endangered or the pregnancy resulted from rape or incest.

The abortions may be performed only in hospitals that are both licensed by the state and accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals — which includes several associations, including the American Hospital Association and the American College of Surgeons.

Kansas hospitals do not have to be accredited, except to be eligible to have abortions performed in them.

Kansas has 156 licensed hospitals and 70 of them are accredited.

Only one of the four hospitals has been identified — Douglass Hospital in Kansas City, Kan. Health officials said less than 20 abortions were performed in each of the others. Douglass officials said 983 were performed there.

Lyman said a news report that many more had been performed there was unaccurate but confirmed that there is a discrepancy between the number reported by the hospital and the number reported to the state.

EPA Administrator Named For Region

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new environmental Protection Agency administrator for the four-state area of Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri is Jerome H. Svore.

He was named to the post by EPA administrator William D. Ruckelshaus.

Svore will be headquartered in Kansas City and be responsible for the four-state Midwest region.

He will replace John M. Rademacher, who has been acting regional administrator since the organization of the agency in December of 1970.

Drug Problem Ignored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has been told heroin problems among U.S. forces in Vietnam escaped massive attack for nine months despite an Army report alerting officials to a sudden sharp leap in drug-overdose deaths.

Rep. John M. Murphy, D-N.Y., told a House public health subcommittee Friday he obtained a memo, prepared at the request of Gen. Creighton Abrams and dated Oct. 23, showing the 1970 January-to-July drug death figure of two a month began climbing suddenly in August.

In late July, Murphy said, "a newly packaged, widely distributed, deadly potent form of heroin was being practically given away to our troops."

Murphy said known drug-overdose deaths increased 175 per cent in August and September, and during the first 18 days of October there were 35 such fatalities.

"At that rate, instead of the two deaths a month ... we were experiencing two deaths a day. That percentage of increase was an stronomical 2,900 per cent," he said.

Murphy added: "Such alarming statistics should have led the government to massive remedial action immediately—not nine months later."

On the other side of Capitol Hill, President Nixon's top narcotics consultant told the Senate Friday the percentage of servicemen found with heroin in their system is rising as a screening program reaches more homebound Vietnam veterans.

Tests of 39,405 departing servicemen from the start of a urinalysis screening procedure June 18 until latest figures were compiled Wednesday, said Dr. Jerome H. Jaffe, showed 2,-159, or 5.4 per cent, with "drug positive urines."

He said plans are being made "to thicken this screen to make it even more effective."

Two weeks ago, Jaffe reported a sampling of 22,000 servicemen found 4.5 per cent with drugs.

Friday, the Army announced that its urinalysis tests to detect heroin users will be given to GIs in the United States beginning next week. The exams will be given to recruits reporting for duty, soldiers being discharged, those with orders for overseas and those currently in rehabilitation programs.

Off-Duty Officers Attacked By Youths

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Two off-duty Kansas City patrolmen were jumped by six youths Friday night near a Parks and Recreation project on the city's east side where they were serving as security guards.

The two officers exchanged shots with the youths, who then fled the scene.

Patrolmen Richar DeMent and Loyd Bermond had been playing volleyball with neighborhood teenagers before the attack occurred.

Q — When the voters approved the 1 per cent city sales tax last year, city employes were promised pay increases. Have these pay raises gone through and how often are they being granted? Why do we have to vote on building the new city hall if it is to be paid for out of the city sales tax? And the last time the city hall question came up on a ballot there was a provision to move the Sedalia Water Department into it. Why didn't the floor plan of the new proposed city hall show an office for the water department? It could save the voters rent money. — L.S.

A— Mayor Jerry Jones said one raise xad already been granted city employes since the city sales tax went into effect last January. He said another raise involving less money, was approved by the City Council on June 1. Jones said any additional raises will depend on periodic reviews by the City Council and the status of the budget next year.

Along with the pay raises for city employes, city officials also promised a new swimming pool in Centennial Park, a new fire station and reduction in the garbage collection fee and personal property assessments reductions. All of these pledges have been kept. With regard to an election on the proposed new city hall, Jones said that third class cities cannot incur indebtedness that would exceed revenues in one fiscal year without a vote of the people. Jones estimated that a city hall built by using city sales tax funds would be paid for in seven to 10 years. Under present plans, according to Jones, there is no plan to provide the Sedalia Water Department with offices because the proposed building lacks the necessary space.

Herb Taylor, manager of the Sedalia Water Department, 111 West Fourth, said the city pays $370 a month for use of the building on Fourth under a five-year lease. The lease expires on Dec. 31, 1971. The building is owned by L. P. Anderson, Kansas City.

Q — What is the school board's status on the purchasing of accident insurance coverage for students and what was the reason for rejecting a proposal for such coverage recently? — O. B.

A — Dr. T. J. Norris, superintendant of schools, said an insurance plan providing accident protection for students has not been discussed by the board. Norris said the board is expected to ask for bids on accident insurance at its board meeting Aug. 9. Norris said the insurance proposal rejected by the board dealt with fire and extended coverage insurance. "The board just decided to go another way than the plan that was presented," Norris said. No reason was given for the rejection, however.

Q — Why do the citizens of Sedalia have to tolerate the filthy fly situation that the State Fair leaves with us each year? This unhealthy situation always exists from the end of the fair until there is a killing frost or freeze. — P. B.

A — Hot Line referred your question to Irwin Gadd, State Director of Milk, Food and Drug Control, District 3 Health Office. Gadd admitted that flies were a problem at the fair. He said, however, that twice-daily sanitation inspections were conducted during the week of the fair.

Gadd said that fair officials have been generally cooperative in cleaning up debris left behind. He said the health department each year makes a report containing recommendations for changes in sanitary procedures at the fair. Much of the fly situation you speak of, according to Gadd, comes from animal pens at the fair. He said that the Division of Health has set down guidelines providing that animal waste be removed from the fair on a regular basis and dumped in fields. He said such a regulation means that waste should be gotten rid of at least every other day during the fair.

Because of environmental factors, only short-duration pesticides can be used to offer additional protection from the flies.

Sentencing Set For Extortionist

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Sentencing Friday was set for Aug. 20 following conviction of a Congress of Racial Equality job developer on federal charges of extortion.

A jury of 11 women and one man brought in the verdict against Oscar Mitchell, 30, who was accused of attempting to extort $1,000 from a television rental firm.

Witnesses at Mitchell's federal district court trial testified he demanded the money from Mr. T's Rentals last September while demanding also the rehiring of James C. Whitington, a Negro, as manager.

Mitchell, who did not testify at the trial, is liable to penalties as high as 20 years in prison and a fine as high as $10,000.

The chairman of the city's CORE office, Henry Thomas, testified Mitchell did not take the action in behalf of the civil rights group.

Activist Lawyers Putting Bar on Trial

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The American Bar Association (ABA), never known as a hotbed of revolutionary thought, is maintaining its reputation, grappling clumsily but decisively with the few signs of legal activism that surface in its membership.

In its recent annual meeting, the influential 150,000-member organization — traditionally a fertile source of mayors, governors, congressmen and presidents — rebuffed a resolution calling for withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam, blocked an effort to call on the U.S. government to hire lawyers to represent the poor and generally kept on paddling straight down the mainstream of American life.

The perpetuation of the ABA's passive leanings comes as no surprise to its critics, one of whom is Michael Tigar, a young lawyer who has just left the law faculty at UCLA to become a visiting fellow at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara, Calif.

"The ABA represents a species of social parasite devoted to making sure that the prerogatives of their profession are maintained and enhanced," Tigar says. "Politically, the ABA center of gravity is a little to the right of Atilla the Hun and it is dominated by people who measure success in middle- and upper-class terms, people who serve whomever has money to spend."

Tigar says the law has lived up to its ideals in protecting against "repressive government" but he is generally pessimistic about the future.

"The new generation of law students is increasingly interested in creative, innovative use of the law in effecting social change," he adds. "But once they get out of school, they all have to eat and values tend to serve those who have the money to buy them."

Arthur Kinoy, a law professor at Rutgers University, Newark, N.J., is more hopeful but nonetheless critical of the ABA.

"Even during the '50s and '60s when the law was making such progress in the field of civil rights for blacks, the ABA was dominated by Southern lawyers and did little to help," he says. "It has never been responsive to the needs of society and it has been repudiated by the new generation of lawyers who are trying to make a reality of the paper promises of the Constitution."

The only real activist call at the ABA meeting came from New York Mayor John V. Lindsay who launched an appeal for increased aggressiveness by lawyers.

"I believe the law can forge new remedies for our ills and develop new judicial protection for our rights," Lindsy said. "I believe 'activism' is a healthy trend. I believe lawyers are and should be leaders in the fight to reform our economic and political institutions."

Lindsay urged that lawyers take the lead in solving problems in the areas of polution, consumer protection, wiretapping, drug abuse, gun control, the legality of the Vietnam war, "no-fault" insurance and the cities. But his speech had all the impact of a bean bag thrown against a brick wall.

While the ABA, now in its 94th year as the dominant lawyers' organization, has tiptoed into many of Lindsay's areas of concern, it operates on a slowly but surely policy that doesn't approach the elan the New York mayor urged.

ABA president-elect Leon Jaworski told the group's Law Student Division: "Our professional commitment to the law is not merely a matter of technical mastery of it. Our commitment is a matter of accepting the very values of order and tranquility that law expresses."

During debate in the ABA House of Delegates on the Vietnam withdrawal resolution, one young lawyer pleaded, "We've seen what happened to the American Medical Association: Less than half the doctors in the country belong to it already and their membership is declining because it isn't facing up to today's issues. We can't let that happen to us." (ABA membership is also less than half of the country's lawyer population but is rising.)

The House of Delegates, however, voted down the resolution, just as the ABA board of governors had tabled a committee recommendation uring that federal funds be used to supply lawyers to the poor.

The tone had been set by Chief Justice Warren Burger in an interview published in the New York Times at the start of the meeting:

"Young people who decide to go into the law primarily on the theory that they can change the world by litigation in the courts I think may be in for some disappointments," Burger said. "It is not the right way to make the decision to go into the law, and that is not the route by which basic changes in a country like ours should be made. That is a legislative and policy process, part of the political process. And there is a very limited role for courts in this respect."

Burger was sitting at the speakers' table, frowning, a few days later when Lindsay made his call for activism.

Belly Dancing Sees Popularity Upswing

By HARRY DUNPHY
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ofter misunderstood in the West and frowned on by many of the puritan regimes in the Middle East, the ancient art of the belly dance is emerging from a state of decline to increasing popularity.

Once confined to seedy night clubs in Beirut, Damascus and Cairo, belly dancers now appear at posh charity balls or music festivals on the same bill as European orchestras.

"It is an art, one of the most beautiful and difficult expressions in the field of dancing," said Nadia Gamal, perhaps the leading dancer in the Middle East. "It is only recently that people at all levels have begun to realize this."

The dance received a bad reputation from European travel writers of another century who stressed what they considered its salaciousness and the immorality of the performers.

With Western appetites thus whetted, belly dancers, invariably named Little Egypt, began turning up at world's fairs in Paris and Chicago at the turn of the century.

But these dancers and the ones presently at work in New York clubs as "Oriental dancers" have "more in common with American burlesque than with serious belly dancing in the Middle East," says one Cairo connoisseur.

Ancient Art

A belly dancer in a Beirut cabaret gyrates in a swirl of filmy draperies, backed up by a group of musicians. In the foreground are flowers and champagne sent by an admirer. Belly dancing has a long tradition in the Arab world. In the past it has been considered salacious and immoral, but now the ancient art is emerging from its state of decline to increasing popularity and respectability. It is analyzed by intellectual connoisseurs and has been performed recently at charity balls and music festivals. (AP)

Miss Gamal, an Alexandrine of Greek-Italian parentage, is more emphatic.

The dance, she said, "is definitely not a matter of shaking or exposing the flesh. It is essentially an expression of femininity. It must suggest sex, but it must do so delicately, hinting rather than asserting, and it must always be in good taste."

Miss Gamal, who is 32 and has long black hair and dark, smouldering eyes, appeared at Lebanon's prestigious Baalbek festival in 1968 on the same bill as Herbert Von Karajan and the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra.

Unlike the striptease, the belly dance never promises more than it can deliver. The dancer never takes off her clothes, and the music is more than incidental.

There are two basic styles of belly dancing. In one, the dancer highlights muscular movement while remaining stationary. This style stems from the "awalem" — those who teach — women whose function at weddings was to stimulate the groom and instruct the bride in lovemaking.

The need for "awalem" has disappeared now that Arab society has become more educated about sex, but belly dancers still are a popular feature at weddings and birthday celebrations.

The second style of dancing, practiced mostly in villages, stresses slow movements across an area. The women are fully clothed and tie a scarf around their hips to accentuate them while men beat on the floor with canes.

No one knows how the belly dance started.

Whatever its beginnings, the dance has had a long tradition. Since the last century it has been most closely associated with Egypt where there are at least 500 belly dancers, some of whom work a circuit that stretches from Rabat to Karachi

They are well paid in an area of the world where the earning power of women is not high. The leading dancers get $100 to $200 a night for a half-hour show and receive many times that for private performances.

But belly dancing has all the trappings of Western show business and from these earnings the dancers must pay agents, publicity and costume costs which run as high as $500.

If the financial rewards are great, permitting dancers to indulge their tastes for sports cars, high fashion, mountain villas or real estate deals, there also are sacrifices.

Few of the top stars marry or, if they do, they refuse to have children because they say it will ruin their figures. Consequently there is a high divorce rate.

Camping Increase Noted in Missouri

More persons are visiting Missouri's state parks now than last year, accounting for a 29.4 per cent increase in the State Park Department's revenue, according to the director of Missouri State Parks, Joseph Jaeger, Jr.

Income for the first six months of 1971 totalled $318,113.93. Concession collections rose nearly 14 per cent to $78,519.83, and overnight camping receipts rose to $204,662.75, accounting for a 50.3 per cent increase.

Attendance for the six-month period at the Lake Ozark Park increased 18 per cent to 333, 413 visitors, of whom 28,437 were overnight campers.

There was a 10 per cent drop in total attendance at Knob Noster Park with 279,296 visitors, although there was a 37 per cent increase to 9,270 in the number of overnight campers.

The highest percentage of incrdase in camping in Missouri was registered by Arrow Rock Park where 2,218 persons stayed overnight, accounting for a 189 per cent rise. The total number of visitors to this park went up 29 per cent to 43,565.

Jaeger said, "Part of this increase is explained by the growing number of park visitors and the increased lengths of their visits. Also, overnight camping fees were increased this year in order to help meet rising costs."

The total attendance in state parks during the first six months of this year increased nearly 11 per cent to $5,864,011 visitors, while overnight campers increased to 381,766, a rise of more than eight per cent. Roaring River State Park near Cassville is the state's most popular park with 38,866 overnight campers and 622,930 total visitors for the first six months.

"This continually growing number of visitors indicates we must consider alternatives for expansion of facilities since we only have limited number of recreational acres available."

Estimate On '71 Corn Coming Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is scheduled on Aug. 11 to make its first estimate on 1971 corn production, but some sources are saying privately that the spread of blight is making a substantive forecast then almost impossible.

"Most of this crop has another six weeks at least before it can be called mature and even then it will have high moisture," one official said Thursday.

It may be September before any real determination of 1971 corn output can be made by the government, he told a reporter.

Normally, the USDA makes its first corn projection in July. It was postponed this year until August because of uncertainty over damage from Southern Leaf Blight.

A spokesman for the Crop Reporting Board said, however, plans still call for making a production estimate next month.

The department announced Thursday that blight probably exists now in some fields in all counties of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Iowa, states which produce most of the nation's corn.

The department still maintains that blight infection generally is light to moderate. Officials admit privately, however, that the disease may be picking up steam in spreading from field to field.

The report issued Thursday, a weekly rundown on blight nationally, said the fungus disease in some areas already has seeped into husks and kernels of plants.

Pathologists point out that the fungus which causes blight develops rapidly during wet, humid weather when temperatures range from 65 to 85 degrees, conditions also suited to optimum corn development.

Reports from the field show many farmers, particularly in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Missouri and Kansas, are applying fungicides in an attempt to head off the disease.

The report said that in some cases chemical application were not started until the disease already was developed. In those instances, the report said, fungicides no longer can prevent severe damage.

"For this reason, farmers in areas where SCLB is likely to be a problem are being urged to check their fields daily for signs of infection," the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has signed an agreement with the National Wheat Institute for carrying out a $2 million research and promotion program for developing new wheat markets.

The campaign was authorized by Congress last year. The money comes from a fund collected in 1968 from wheat exporters who paid a so-called "inverse subsidy" to the government for higher price guarantees on the world market.

Fees originally collected totalled about $4.2 million, and under the arrangement, were to be distributed to wheat farmers. The $2 million represents the unclaimed part of the fund.

The institute was authorized by Congress to act as the agent for carrying out research and promotion projects.

Day Dawns

At the door of the milkhouse, John Nepermann turns the last of his 56 Holstein cows out to pasture after the 6 a.m. milking which begins his day's work. It's a 75-minute machine operation on Nepermann's dairy farm at Udina, Ill., near Chicago — and it has to be repeated at 6 p.m., day in, day out. Napermann describes himself as a member of a minority group: the number of dairy farmers in the U.S. has declined severely, although milk production has increased. (AP)

Life on a Dairy Farm Has Distinct Advantages

UDINA, Ill. (AP) — John Nepermann doesn't do any of these things: ride commuter trains, fight expressway traffic, worry about profit-sharing plans, cancel business appointments, sleep in on weekends, take off holidays, breathe foul air or have fights with the boss.

John Nepermann is a farmer; a dairy farmer.

He has lived nearly 30 years on 160 acres about 45 miles west of Chicago. His father bought the farm in 1942 and Nepermann took over in 1952.

Now, he, his wife, Clarice, and their children, Becky, Paul and Beth, reside on the same acreage with seemingly few of the problems faced by the other six million residents of the Chicago metropolitan area.

Nepermann can't sleep late because he has 56 Holstein cows who must be milked at 6 a.m. every day including Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. He can't go to early shows or dinners or watch the network news because the cows must be milked again at 6 p.m.

His day begins at 5:30 a.m. with coffee in the large, modern kitchen he added on to the house last year. Then, with Clarice helping, he begins the 75-minute, machine milking operation.

The milk flows directly from the cow into a 400-gallon stainless steel tank where it is immediately cooled to 40 degrees. The tank is emptied daily by the dairy which buys 100,000 gallons a year from Nepermann.

During school months, Paul, 15, helps his father clean the barn before school. He also helps with the evening milking. In the summer he is available for help in the fields and other jobs.

At the kitchen table, Nepermann ate his breakfast of juice, cereal, an egg and fresh milk.

"The daily routine is grinding," he said, "but I enjoy being out in the fields. I didn't want to farm when I got out of high school, but I did and after a while, I thought, why not? The only thing I miss is being able to have days off and a vacation.

"I thought many times about quitting, getting a job somewhere, but being independent is what kept me from getting out. Now, I'm becoming a member of a minority group. The number of dairy farmers has declined severely."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported that the number of producing dairy cattle dropped from 24 million in 1950 to 12 million in 1970. At the same time, milk production increased from 116 billion pounds in 1950 to 117 billion in 1970.

Nepermann's hands and face are tanned and leathered from the four seasons' winds. He moves effortlessly but methodically through his chores, a model of the self-discipline required for farming.

Nepermann rarely travels the 45 miles to Chicago. "The only time I go is for meetings. I don't like to fight crowds, and you can see the pollution in the air. The air still is good out here."

Clarice Nepermann also was brought up on a farm. She could be a perfect prototype for a farm wife. Her face is the shape and color of a perfect apple. She always smiles.

"I can't say I don't envy town wives, but on a farm there are so many things for the children," she said. Her day is filled with helping during the morning milking, sewing, gardening and canning as well as other household chores.

"Most of our friends are farmers or used to farm so they understand the life, but for doing things, dairy farming is the worst. You just can't leave the cows," she said.

"As far as the kids go, it's great. Maybe I'm just being ignorant, but I have none of the anxieties about drugs or other things that you read about."

Farm Roundup

Some Price Improve Improvements Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Producers of hogs, milk and soybeans got better prices for their goods during the month that ended July 15, but cattlemen, wheat farmers and many others saw prices drop, the Agriculture's Department says.

The Crop Reporting Board said Friday the over-all July index of prices received by farmers remained the same as in June.

Farm expenses also rode a statistical seesaw and wound up unchanged, the board said. The prices farmers had to pay for feed and feeder livestock were lower, but higher costs for building materials offset the reductions. But they were 5 per cent more than in July last year.

After all the ups and downs balancing each other out, the so-called parity ratio based on a 1914-19 formula remained at 70 per cent, the same as in June.

The department also uses a "ratio" computed on 1967 costs and prices. That was put at 94 per cent, the same as in June.

Meat animal prices collectively increased 1 per cent during the month but included some wide variations. Hog prices, for example, rose 9 per cent to $19.10 per hundredweight, a boost of $1.60 from June but $4.70 below a year earlier.

All beef cattle averaged $28.40 per hundredweight, down 60 cents from June but 30 cents more than a year ago.

The index for grain used for human food dropped 6 per cent, including a 12-cent decline for wheat to $1.34 per bushel. A year earlier wheat averaged $1.23 for the month.

Soybeans averaged $3.18 per bushel, compared with $2.98 in June and $2.72 a year ago.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin has named Talcott W. Edminster, a 50-year-old engineer, to head the Agricultural Research Service.

Edminster, a career Agriculture Department employe, becomes the first administrator of the modern-day ARS not to have a doctor's degree in agricultural science.

He succeeds Dr. George W. Irving, 60, who retired this week. Irving, well known among scientists for his work in biochemistry and plant diseases, headed ARS since 1965.

Edminster, born in East Freetown, Mass., is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts and holds a master's degree in agricultural engineering from the University of Georgia.

He is the third administrator of ARS, organized in its present form in 1952.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production of red meat from cattle, sheep and hogs was 11 per cent more in June than a year earlier, says the Agriculture Department.

Beef production in June was more than 1.9 billion pounds, up six per cent, and pork nearly 1.2 billion, a gain of 22 per cent from a year earlier. Veal production was down four per cent, and lamb and mutton down five per cent, the Crop Reporting Board said.

Glimpses Of Labor Situation

WASHINGTON—Labor negotiators bargained Saturday toward a midnight deadline that may bring the first steel industry strike in 12 years. "Some slight progress" was reported being made Friday.

PITTSBURGH—Steel production has slowed to a trickle as all nine firms engaged in bargaining with the United Steelworkers of America shut down their plants in anticipation of a strike.

WASHINGTON—Strikes by the United Transportation Union against six railroads Friday raised to 10 the number of struck lines and to 120,000 the number of workers off their jobs. Talks resumed Friday at the Labor Department in the effort to end the selective strikes that have idled 41 per cent of the nation's rail track system.

WASHINGTON—Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., introduced a resolution in Congress to give Nixon authority to order a return to work on the railroads if he decided it is necessary during the month-long congressional recess which starts Friday.

WASHINGTON—Labor Secretary James Hodgson said reports from 25 governors say the effects of the rail strikes in their states range from "critical to disastrous." California farmers estimate their losses at $2.5 million a day and some 22,000 coal miners have been idled by the closing of 250 mines.

Death Penalty In Court Focus

WASHINGTON (AP) — T death penalty will be the fi order of business for the Supreme Court when the new term begins in October.

Although there has been no public announcement, the court has notified lawyers to be ready to argue four capital punishment cases beginning Oct. 12, first hearing day of the term.

The scheduling gives the cases priority and means a decision could be announced by winter, provided the justices are not seriously split over the issues.

More than 600 men and women on death rows in 33 states have a stake in the outcome. There has been no execution in the United States since 1967.

This will be the first time the court has considered the theory that the 8th Amendment's ban on "cruel and unusual punishments" outlaws the death penalty. The contention is advanced by John Henry Furman, of Georgia and Earnest James Aikens Jr. of California, both convicted of murder.

Furman was sentenced to death in Chatham County in 1968 for the slaying of William J. Micke during a burglary of Micke's home. Furman claimed his pistol fired when he tripped over a wire.

Aikens was sentenced to death in 1965 for the murder of a Ventura housewife, Mary Eaton. Mrs. Eaton was stabbed to death in her home.

The other two cases involve rape, and involve the single question of whether the 8th Amendment prohibits capital punishment when the victim's life was not taken.

Two black men convicted of raping white women are appealing.

Lucious Jackson was sentenced to death in Chatham County, Ga., in 1968 for the rape of Mary George Rose, a physician's wife. Elmer Branch was sentenced in 1967 for the rape of Mrs. Grady Stowe, an elderly widow, at her home near Vernon, Tex.

Georgia and Texas juries have wide discretion in sentencing defendants in rapes. The sentence range from a year in Georgia and five years in Texas all the way up to death.

Last May, the court in a 6-3 ruling rejected two arguments outlawing capital punishment itself.

See Higher Food Prices As Drawback to Market

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some top-ranking economists in the Agriculture Department reportedly are betting that Britain will not enter the European Common Market in the near future, mainly because of concern there over higher food prices to the British consumer.

Some authorities have predicted that if Britain does accept Common Market policies it will mean at least a 15 per cent jump in retail food prices charged the London housewife.

Officially, Agriculture Department policy makers are silent on speculation about British entry into the community. Frequently, however, they have discussed some of the effects of Common Market expansion on U.S. farm exports.

That attitude generally has been that the United States will have a tougher time selling farm products to the Common Market, as a single entity the largest customer of the American farmer.

For that reason, British refusal to accept terms would be welcomed by some Nixon administration farm officials, at least on the basis of delaying short-term complications in the lucrative trade arrangements which last year totaled $1.6 billion in cash sales to Common Market buyers.

That was the value of U.S. farm goods sold to the present Common Market's six member nations, France, Germany, Luxembourg, Italy, The Netherlands and Belgium and represented nearly one-fifth of all U.S. farm exports last year.

In addition, Britain-specifically, the United Kingdom—is one of the world's largest importers of farm products, taking some $5.6 billion worth last year from all supplies, including $450 million worth from the United States.

Traditionally, Britain has had lower agricultural prices than most of the countries on the continent and until recently had a different kind of price support program.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Clarence D. Palmby says Britain used "deficiency payments" to compensate farmers. That means, he told congress recently, that Britain's internal market price for most agricultural products is the world price.

"Products enter free of duty or at modest duties, and the farmer is given a payment by the government to make up the difference between what he receives from the market and pre-set producer guaranteed price," Palmby said.

But even if Britain did not join the Common Market, Palmby said, the farm trade problems with that country would not disappear.

"Quite the contrary," Palmby said. "Since 1964 the UK on its own has been moving away from its traditional policies. For a variety of reasons it has been shifting toward an EC (Common Market) type of policy and away from the deficiency payment system."

The greatest impact on Common Market expansion-adding Ireland, Denmark and Norway to the community in addition to Britain—would be on U.S. grains, rice, tobacco, lard, fresh and certain canned fruits, and citrus juices, Palmby said.

It appears, Palmby said, that Britain, Denmark and Ireland would accept existing Common Market farm policies.

The American Farm Bureau Fderation is even more explicit over Common Market expansion.

"We are threatened by the creation of a huge, walled market involving one-half of the world trade in agricultural commodities," the AFBF told Congress.

"Inclusion of the United Kingdom and other European counties. . . may well compound our difficulties and further limit our opportunities to compete in western Europe," the farm organization said.

Farm Roundup

Decline Is Estimated In Net Farmer Income

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says net income from the nation's farms in the first half of 1971 equalled an annual rate of $14.7 billion, far below that of a year earlier.

In the first six months of 1970, the net income rate was a near-record high of $17 billion. Disastrously low hog prices, corn blight and other factors, however, caused net income for all of 1970 to slump to $15.7 billion.

A farm income situation report said Thursday net earnings appear to be rising now in the second half of 1971, but it suggested the 1971 net will still be less than last year.

"If farm numbers continue to decline at the rate of recent years, average net farm income realized per farm in 1971 may only be slightly smaller than the near-record $5,374 per farm of 1970," the report said.

That means fewer farms and less per-farm net income.

The report also revised the 1970 and 1969 net income figures. The department had reported 1969 net income as $16.2 billion. In the new report, it was put at $16.8 billion. The 1970 net level earlier had been $15.8 billion and now has been revised lower to $15.7 billion. Thus the decrease from 1969 to 1970, first put at $400 million, now is $1.1 billion.

A large share of the expected decline in 1971 net farm income can be attributed to cutbacks in government payments, the report says.

Through May, the 1971 farm payments under the new Food and Agricultural Act passed last year totaled $168 million. That was about the same as for the same period in 1979.

"However," the report added, "for the 1971 calendar year, government payments will likely be down 10-15 per cent from the $3.7 billion paid out in 1970."

Cash receipts in the period were at the yearly rate of $50.1 billion, approximately the same as in 1970. But rising production expenses narrowed the margin for net income.

The department, however, is optimistic about the second half of 1971.

"Prices for most crops will decline seasonally, but may hold around year-earlier levels, even though current indications point to a sizable incraase in 1971-crop output."

'Abdication of Duty' Over Pentagon Papers

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unofficial House panel probing the Pentagon papers has heard repeated testimony that Congress abdicated its responsibility to maintain a check and balance on the president's handling of foreign affairs.

One House member suggested Congress be abolished if it could not live up to its responsibilities. And another said the American public should be informed Congress is not doing its job.

The testimony came during a three-day hearing called by 17 antiwar congressmen to probe the 47-volume Pentagon papers and what they showed about the government's inner workings. The documents traced origins of U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Jonathan Mirsky, a Dartmouth professor and codirector of the East Asia Center, told the panel Congress doesn't know about important foreign-policy decisions because it doesn't want to accept the responsibility accompanying that knowledge.

"It's not that you have a need to know," he said. "It's that you don't want to know. What you really need is a desire to know. And you might not want to stay in Congress any more if you knew" the results of the policy, he added.

Daniel Ellsberg, a former Defense Department researcher who says he leaked the war documents to newsmen, said Congress should press the executive department for details of the Cambodian and Laotian invasions.

"When will Congress decide it has the need to know what planning went on in the Cambodian invasion or the Laos invasion?" he asked. "There's no question there was great deception."

Ellsberg, who helped prepare the Pentagon papers and is under indictment after being accused of possessing copies, said Congress bears responsibility for the Vietnam war but not as much as the President. "The responsibility of those lied to is not as great as those doing the lying," he said.

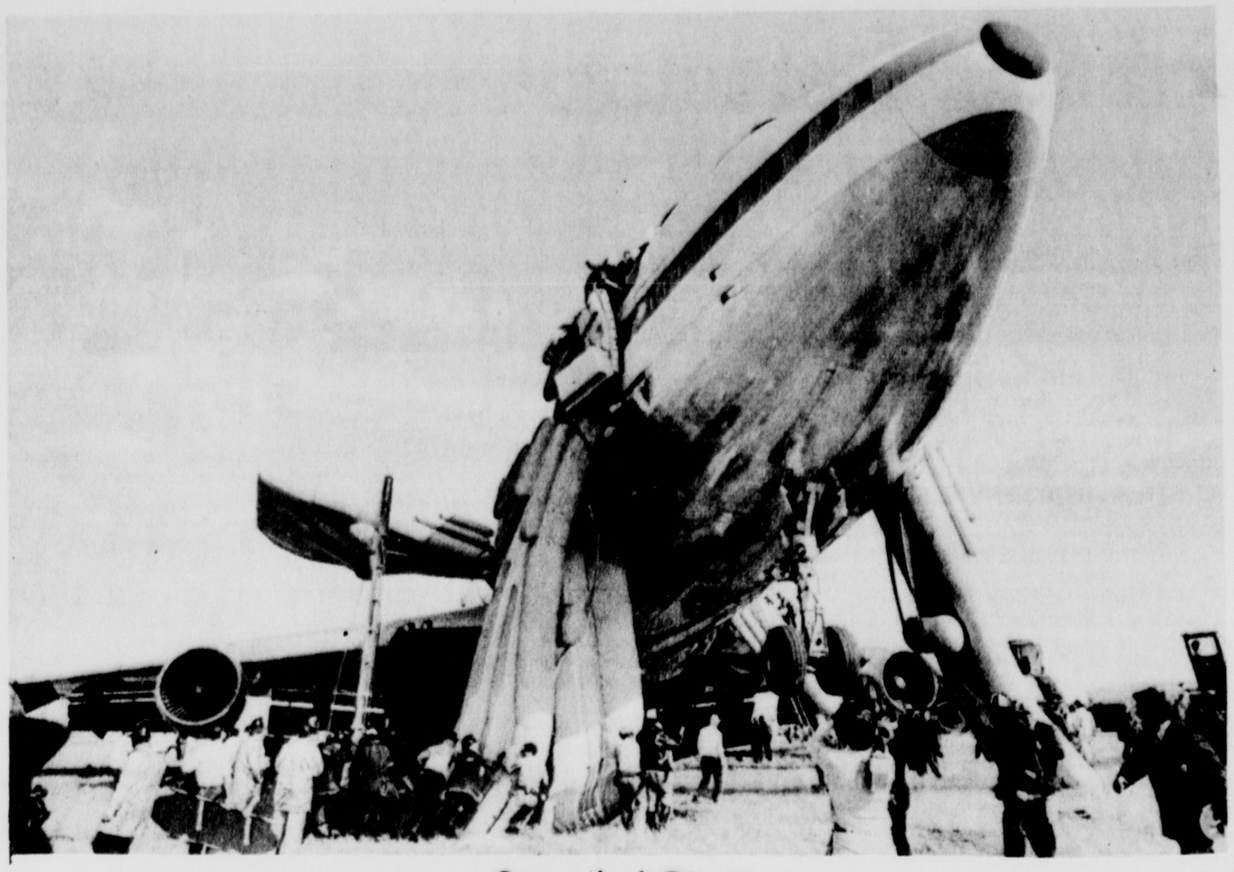

The former Rand Corp. employe suggested Congress consider impeaching officials who refuse to disclose information on foreign policy or those who lie about foreign affairs.

He urged consideration of impeachment proceedings against Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and the secretaries of the Army and Air Force.

"Congress has in effect signed over its responsibilities," he said, adding "congressmen seem to almost act out this role of helplessness" and are not serving their constituents.

Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., told the panel people should say: "If Congress can't be a meaningful institution, 'Go home, or be abolished.'"

Intoxicated Warden Liberates Prisoners

IGUALA, Mexico (AP) — Porfirio Roman, the warden of the local prison, came home drunk Monday night. Shouting "Long live Mexico and our glorious revolution!" he opened the cells and told his 125 prisoners they were free.

When the prisoners started filing out of the building, guards on the walls turned on the searchlights and warned the men to return to their cells. Most obeyed, but five managed to escape amid a hail of bullets.

Roman was subdued by some of his subordinates and locked in one of the cells. The government fired him and said Wednesday it will prosecute him.

Pens Keep Hogs Happy

CARDWELL, Mo. (AP) — Posh pig pens are keeping some Missouri hogs happy and fat.

Some of the hogs live in a converted school house near Cardwell, where they have heat in winter and air conditioning in summer.

"They do have pretty good living arrangements," says Flake McHaney, a Kennett lawyer and businessman who has been urging farmers to diversify from farming. While the hog houses are not firsts, he says, they are "among the most modern anywhere in the United States."

Flois Harrison and his son Dwight keep their hogs in a $7,000 aluminum house trailer, which has running water and slat-floor toilets.

They say the hogs are less irritable when "in a controlled environment." They submit readily to vaccinations.

As he looked over his hogs, he said, "They're really contented. They don't like it when they have to leave. You can't get them out."

With the good life also comes problems for the hogs.

J. B. Robertson of White Oak, Mo., said the close living in the hog houses can create a problem initially in that the hogs "don't like the smell of each other. Try putting people that close. We spray them so they smell the same and then they get along."

Another problem is when it's feeding time. The hogs hear the whir of machinery and know in a short time the food will be served via conveyor. Robertson said in a large hog house where half the hogs are fed first, the others just about go crazy waiting for their machinery to start up.

"Your confined hogs have better gainability," said Robertson, "but some just can't stand confinement. In a lot of ways, they are just like people."

Impressions, Not Imitations

No two sculptures, fashioned after the same model, resemble each other or the model. And that is as it should be, according to art professor Grant Kenner. He believes that "art is our expression of what we see, not an imitation of what's out in the real world." The model here is Mrs. Donna Hunt, Green Ridge, who inspired the statues surrounding her but had no control over how the artists registered their impression on clay.

Art Expresses Emotions

Challenge

Thirteen of the 20 sculpture students at SFCC were area residents not enrolled as regular students. Here, one of them, Robert R. Parkhurst, Route 3, finds sculpturing a challenge to his patience and creativity.

By P. C. THOMAS
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

Art can not only enable an artist to communicate his feelings to others but also to himself.

This about sums up the philosophy of art professor Grant Kenner, who Friday completed teaching a course in sculpture at State Fair Community College.

Kenner, who is senior professor of art at Culver-Stocton College, Canton, Mo., believes that "a person can't even know how he feels until he projects his feelings to others. "Sadness," he explained, "is expressed in slumping over or in crying. We communicate our thoughts and feelings through some external expression. It's got to be out there so you can feel it, sense it. . ."

Since July 19, Kenner taught a class of 20 area residents how to express themselves through sculpture. The course, which was the first one in three-dimensional art at SFCC, was sponsored jointly by the Missouri State Council on the Arts and the Sedalia Council on the Arts.

Kenner, who has held one-man shows in Europe and in the United States, is more than an expert in the field of the plastic arts.

A former nuclear chemist with the Atomic Energy Commission, he can articulate and theorize on art so effectively that he finds an instant attentive audience every time he talks about art.

Kenner explained that he quit his job at the Atomic Energy Commission because he realized "that was not important as far as people and human relations was concerned."

"The first step in being an artist," he said, "is knowing yourself. Art provides a very direct and intimate channel through which you can know yourself and then project yourself to others."

He said that he likes to see his students experience this gradual self-discovery through three-dimensional art. "They look at their own sculpture and compare it with those of others. It's very subtle," he said referring to the influences on his students.

However, Kenner prefers to let each student leave his stamp of individuality on his work of art. He's quick to point out the subtle nuances of the human anatomy in teaching sculpture.

"See the bicep curl?" he'd say, pointing to the live model. But there his instructions stop. He makes the student perceive the mood and the detail for himself. In answer to a student's question on whether or not a certain portion of his statue's anatomy was disproportionate, Kenner replied, "If that's the way you want it, that's fine."

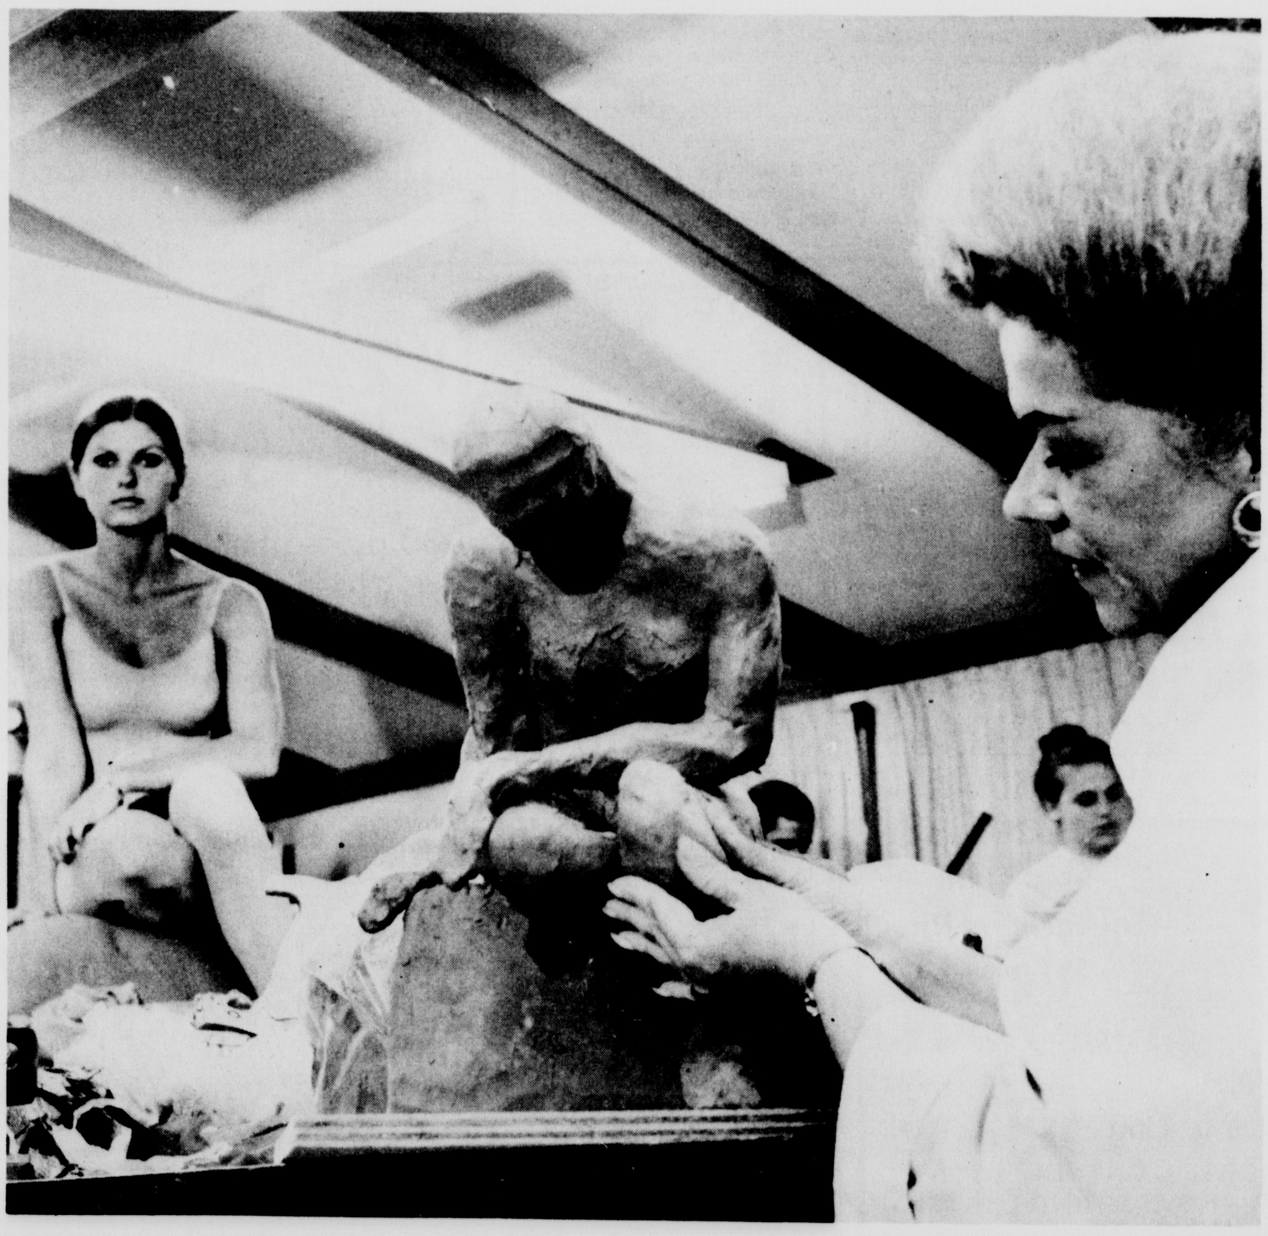

His students find this more challenging than being told explicitly what to do.

"Art is our expression of what we see, not an imitation of what's out in the real world," Kenner insists. And for this reason he doesn't expect every student's work to look alike or express the same feeling.

The Basic Idea...

Mrs. Jerry Greer, 232 State Fair Blvd., takes a tip from art professor Grant Kenner who explains some basic principles of three-dimensional composition.

'Touching Is Feeling'

Making her impression of the model on clay is Mrs. James B. Penrod, Whiteman AFB. An accomplished portrait painter who graduated from Kansas University, she said she wished the sculpture course would "go on and on. Two weeks are not long enough." She pointed out that "the touch and feeling" involved in working with clay provides much more emotional appeal to sculpture and makes the artist "a better rounded person."

Free From

The model's anatomy gets abbreviated at the creative hands of art major Miss Ann Garst, 423 West Sixth. She explained that her work is a composition of the model's stomach and legs — all intertwined. Miss Garst said she likes the course because it's "mainly doing your own thing."

Paris Fashion Houses Present Winter Collections

Caped Creations

Two creations from the winter collection of Lanvin presented in Paris Wednesday are this "Yang" made of black satin and edged in red (left) which has a Chinese styled kimono jacket to go over matching pants and a "Ferarri," a green felt cape underlined with hamster fur. The cape is worn over a green jersey skirt and brown jersey with rolled collar. Boots in pale brown elephant skin complete the outfit. (UPI)

Fashions By Givenchy

Hubert de Givenchy, known as "reigning king of high fashion," showed these two unusual outfits from his '71-'72 fall-winter collection to the applause of fans, buyers and fashion critics in Paris Thursday. On the left, a barebacked gown in navy faille with matching sleeveless coat, all printed with yellow, green and blue stars. On the right, an orange, red and gray tweed suit trimmed with fringe. (UPI)

Evening Elegance

Fall flowers gently cascade down Count Romi's lean and lush velvet coat. Max Adler, designer, used embroidered bands of autumn-time blossoms to bring additional dazzle to his dramatic silhouette. A warm and wonderful way to coverup for evening.

Design with a Difference

Designer Emanuel Ungaro gave young, skinny girls the "swim suit" look in his winter fashion collection shown in Paris Wednesday. After a hard day on the ski slopes, Ungaro suggests this black "shorts suit," which fits like a skin-tight bathing suit. The model holds a jacket of multicolored peacock feathers to be worn over the suit. (UPI)

For Winter Warmth

Designer Guy Laroche presented these fashionably practical winter coverups. These elegant silhouettes were shown Wednesday with his winter collection in shades of bright red, orange and yellow. The sport coats cover matching pants or spats. (UPI)

'Right' of Welfare Is Not Guaranteed

Despite nearly 40 years of domestic liberalism, there is still something that sticks in the American craw when people start talking about "welfare rights."

The point is pertinent, the National Welfare Rights Organization having just completed its convention in Providence, R. I. Although a full report on the group's resolutions has not been made available, there is no doubt about the tone of the convention.

Realizing that political power depends largely upon size, the NWRO, in the first five years of its existence, has set out to increase its membership and the benefits paid welfare "clients." It brags about its role in expanding the nation's welfare rolls, now past 13 million at last count.

Among other things, the NWRO opposes President Nixon's welfare reform plan that would guarantee a family of four $2,400 a year. It wants $6,500.

It is also opposed to work requirements in the bill that might require welfare recipients to take "demeaning" employment.

Just for the heck of it, we would like to see the NWRO, at its next convention, pass THESE resolutions:

— A vote ot thanks to the American taxpayer, who year after year sees a larger chunk of his paycheck going for welfare support;

— Recognition of the fact that welfare, necessary and compassionate as it is, is not a RIGHT. It is rather an act of organized charity, ultimately dependent upon the consent of the governed.

But, alas, this will not be. The National Welfare Rights Organization will still prefer hotly indignant resolutions decrying America's insensitivity to the plight of the poor, and continue to cry for more, more, more.

Is Scotty Reston Wired For Sound?

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — My good friend James "Scotty" Reston of the New York Times has just had his appendix taken out at the Anti-Imperialist Hospital in Peking. According to Reston's reports, he received excellent care from the Chinese doctors and they treated him like a king — well, like an anti-imperialist peasant anyway.

Buchwald

But as I read the article about the removal of Scotty's appendix, a terrible thought crossed my mind. What if the Chinese, unknown to Reston, put something back in place of the appendix?

Suppose, and I must admit I have no basis for it except a wicked imagination, the Chinese sewed a tiny radio transmitter in Scotty's insides, so that no matter where he went in the world, they could hear everything someone is saying to him.

Everyone knows that Scotty talks to the most important people in the world. The Chinese also have to assume that as soon as he comes back to the United States he will see President Nixon. What better listening post would the People's Republic of China have in the White House than James Reston's stomach?

Knowing how the Chinese work, all they would have to do is have one of their agents stationed within a mile of Scotty with a receiver and they would be able to record everything that goes on in the highest branches of government.

In fairness to the People's Republic of China, they probably didn't plan to sew a bug in Scotty.

As far as they were concerned he was just another aggressor and running dog of the Western capitalist lackey press. But when good fortune struck and Scotty's appendix started to ache, the top Chinese secret service people must have realized they had a golden opportunity.

The big problem they probably faced was to find a transmitter that could not only take a beating in Scotty's innards, but would also have enough power to survive for any period of time.

Fortunately, the Chinese had the solution. Due to excellent scientific achievements, the People's Republic anti-imperialist laboratories have perfected a tiny new battery which works on monosodium glutamate. Knowing Reston's penchant for Chinese food, which contains large doses of monosodium glutamate, the powers in Peking have no fear that the transmitter will work for years. One egg roll alone can keep Scotty's bug sending out signals for 18 months.

While this in itself could make Scotty a walking security risk, some people here in Washington fear that the Chinese may have gone even further and inserted not only a listening transmitter, but the X104 Mao Tse-tung mini-speaker. If they did this, a Red Chinese agent, by twisting a dial, could make Scotty spout Mao Tse-tung's thoughts at the most inopportune time.

If, for example, he was asked in front of a Senate committee why the New York Times printed the Pentagon Papers, Reston might get up and yell:

"Because all reactionaries are paper tigers, and the feudal landlord class and slave-owning bourgeoisie must be alerted to the people's struggle to overthrow the chains and impotent thinking of the misguided intellectuals and lackey counter-revolutionary followers of our corrupt leaders."

Now this sort of thing could be embarrassing, not only to Reston, but also to the New York Times.

I wish to restate that I have no evidence that anything was done to Scotty at the Anti-Imperialist Hospital in Peking other than to remove his appendix. But I don't think we should take any chances. What I'm trying to say to you, Scotty, wherever you are, is that for the nation's security, we're going to have to cut you open again as soon as you come home.

Controversy Stirs Over Navy Testing

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Five macaque monkeys have died after being exposed to microwaves from a military radar set during an unpublicized government sponsored test. This raises anew the controversy of what the rays do to man.

The Navy, which sponsored the test in Hawaii, has tens of millions of dollars tied up in radar devices. Air Force spy planes, Army ABM radars, microwave ovens and other military microwave devices raise the investment to hundreds of millions.

Faced with the possibility of junking or remodeling costly equipment and retraining the men who operate it, the Navy abruptly cancelled the monkey tests a year before they were scheduled to end.

The sudden cancellation is ominously like the inexplicable transfer of Air Force Col. Alvin Burner which we reported last month. Burner also had warned the military about microwaves.

In the monkey tests, we have been able to obtain preliminary reports before they can disappear forever into Pentagon files. The experiment, called a "biological essay," was conducted with Navy equipment by Dr. Milton Zaret, an eye surgeon who is also a well-known microwave scientist.

Eight monkeys were used as "controls" and got no radiation. Eight more got only eight hours of exposure to the radar set. Sixteen got daily or weekly doses of varying strengths.

Five of the sixteen regularly exposed monkeys died, three of them after doses no greater in strength than the standards set by the military for servicemen. All 16 of the unexposed or lightly exposed monkeys are still healthy.

The five monkeys died from September 24, 1970 to October 27, 1970. Word that the monkeys were dying reached the Navy. On February 8, 1971, the Navy told Zaret that the contract was being terminated because of "the limitations in our present research budgets."

The poor mouth cry on the $75,000 needed to finish the contract came even as the Navy tossed billions into the sea on numerous far-fetched boondogles.

Zaret, a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, appealed to the top Navy scientific brass. The deaths of monkeys from high, regular radar exposure didn't mean Navy radar men were going to die, he reasoned. But it did point to potentially terrible and unexplored dangers.

At worst, Zaret said, the monkeys who survived the tests should be kept alive for years to see whether such long-range effects as cataracts might result. Still, the Navy refused. The Navy action upset, but did not totally surprise, the balding scientist. It was not unprecedented.

The Army had already hassled Zaret over his tests for them which showed the dangers of microwaves to GI radar men and the high temperature rises in rabits after microwave exposure. In fact, Zaret formally accused the Army colonel of telling him that the colonel's "office would not support any further research which could be used medico-legally against the Army." "Medico-legal" refers to possible suits against the Army from GIs injured by microwave exposure.

Despite these battles with the military, however, Zaret was invited to the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research for an important conference on microwaves this spring. There he warned of a possible 10 per cent cataract rate for workers exposed to intensive microwaves for long periods. He suggested tumors, gland troubles, even death could result.

Zaret contends he has isolated 42 certain microwave-caused cataracts. The Russians, he said, have a microwave exposure standard 100 times lower than the U.S. And progressive firms such as Bell Labs, he said, limit exposure to one milliwatt per square centimeter instead of the 10 milliwatts allowed in the U.S. military. Five milliwatts are permitted by the Health, Education, and Welfare Department for microwave oven leakage, once they have been installed.

One reason for the questionable and vague U.S. standards is that federal officials set them in collaboration with the very industry which makes the microwave equipment. In fact, when Zaret went to a meeting at HEW to which he had been admitted as an observer by HEW, he was kicked out so the HEW regulators could do public business in private with the oven makers.

NOTE: The Air Force has done its own in-house study of radar scope men in EC121 spy planes, and comes to a predictably soothing conclusion. The survey, however, did not deal with the radar "trouble shooters" who get sudden "hot" radar exposure, nor did the Air Force do in-depth work with ex-radar men who developed cataracts years after their exposure.

The American taxpayer unknowingly footed the bill for the recent annual picnic of the U.S. Army Computer Systems Command at Ft. Belvoir, Va. The commanding general was retiring, said Deputy Commander Col. Al R. Hoffman, so they decided to honor the gentleman by holding their yearly outdoor fete during working hours.

So at noon on July 23, some 500 headquarters personnel dropped their paper clips and enjoyed an afternoon of pony riding, softball, watermelon eating, "balloon stomps," and beer drinking contests.

Scheduled activities ceased promptly at five, however, presumably to spare the taxpayer overtime payments.

Sesquicentennial

Into this land of forests and streams
Came the white man with his fears and dreams,
The Spanish first, who were westward bound,
Then came the French who had gained the ground,
Traders, explorers, missionaries came
With Louisiana becoming the name,
But the Louisiana Purchase made it free
As American soil in 1803,
'Twas the Territory of Missouri when that was done
It became a state in 1821;
Here were the Indians, Foxes, Ioways, Delwares,
Osages, Sac, Shawnees, felt this land was theirs,
And the Missouris where our state name was derived
Lived here where they hunted, fished and thrived,
But into this country came the white pioneer
To places where timber and water were near Here they built their cabins and started their lives
And with them came, certainly, very brave wives,
Here they found farmland and towns did they build,
With very crude instruments their soil they tilled,
The first settlement was at St. Genevieve
Yet government into life did they weave
With St. Charles the first capital of the state
And Missouri became to the far west the gate,
There were wars with Indians, then war with each other
Neighbor against neighbor, brother against brother,
Through the first years came covered wagons, oxen drawn
With many settling here but some moving on,
Into the state did the emigrants press
Came the Overland Stage and the Pony Express,
Missouri, rich in minerals, in beauty, in land,
From other states came band after band,
A few years the growing government arranged
To have the place of the capital changed,
In 1826 the next choice was set
At Jefferson City, where it is yet,
Towns grew into cities, the state progressed
With fine agricultural land was it blessed,
They raised champion cattle, hogs and mules;
Education increased wits its wonderful schools;
A century and a half now has gone by
We are proud of our state and this is why,
We have St. Louis, Kansas City, Springfield, St. Joe,
We have the Ozarks where we all love to go,
We have rivers and streams, caves and springs,
We have culture, hillbillies and all kinds of things,
The Shepherd of the Hills, the Land of Mark Twain,
Truman, who won his whistle-stop campaign,
Famous doctors, actors, artists and writers,
Generals who led to victory their fighters,
Singers, musicians, and engineers,
People who have carved themselves great careers;
We have Hermann and its Maifest held each May,
Its original buildings still standing today,
We have Neosho, the City of Flowers,
We have just about everything in this state of ours,
We have Arrow Rock, scene of the past,
Boonville and Lexington where history was cast,
We have change of the seasons, which sometimes bring gripes,
And we have become noted for our corncob pipes,
We have Joplin, Windsor, Chillicothe, Centralia,
We've a big State Fair you will find at Sedalia,
We have Columbia and its famous M.U.,
We have Kirksville, Warrensburg, Maryville College, too,
We have Poplar Bluff, Cape Girardeau, Higginsville,
Towns built in a valley or on a high hill,
We have Marshall and Warsaw, we've towns big and little
This state in our union almost in the middle
From north to south, from east to west,
There isn't a place not doing its best,
At our sesquicentennial our praises are loud
A century and a half of which we are proud.

British Policemen Face Familiar Crisis

Arm Of The Law

A young London policeman hauls away a demonstrator during an anti-war demonstration outside the U.S. Embassy in Grosvenor Square, London. LONDON (AP) — "Give me every time the calm, unarmed, polite British policeman," Prince Philip, the queen's husband, said in a speech.

"Pigs, pigs, we gotta get rid of the pigs," West Indian demonstrators shouted in the Notting Hill section of London.

Somewhere in between stand 105,000 British cops, undermanned and underpaid, shunned by the university graduates and nonwhite immigrants they are trying to recruit. Young policemen, the future backbone of the force, are leaving by the thousands. Crime and civilian complaints against the police are rising.

What's going on with Britain's finest, famed for fair play, Scotland Yard sleuths and big, blue hats?

They share the problems of police in other countries where a gray area is growing between what is condoned and what is condemned, and where a man can earn more in a factory than he can pounding a beat. They deal with a drug problem that's become more of a social phenomenon than a crime, they face sharpening hostility from youth, and they're required to act in morality cases where public opinion itself is confused.

Some 14,000 police jobs—13 per cent of the present manpower—are going begging in Britain. Scotland Yard, police headquarters for 10.5 million metropolitan Londoners, would like to add 5,000 to its 20,000-member force, but can't find the recruits.

A 19-year-old bobbie—the nickname comes from Sir Robert Peel, who founded the modern force 140 years ago—is paid $2,160 a year, plus a housing allowance. With no promotions, he can look forward to $3,408 after 22 years—more than the national average industrial wage of about $3, about $3,020. Chief inspectors earn up to $5,064 and a policeman can retire after 30 years at two-thirds of his top salary.

Yet more than 3,500 dissatisfied policemen quit in 1969 and the resignation was higher last year.

"The danger age is 22 to 26," says Eric Wright, a Scotland Yard spokesman. "They get married and the wife feels the social stigma of her husband being a copper. There's shift work, so they never see the kids, and the bloke next door is earning more on an assembly line."

Police say crime has more than doubled in the past 10 years, while police manpower has gone up 27 per cent.

Inspector Reginald Gale, chairman of the Police Federation, the policeman's union, says he knows of one city of more than 100,000 that some nights has only a sergeant and one probationary constable on duty. He won't name the city.

Gale worries because the resignations of seasoned policemen are lowering the average age of police forces—to less than 32 years in some communities.

To boost recruiting, London police ran a six-week "Mansize '70" advertising campaign last summer. It produced 94 male and 26 female recruits at a cost of $48,000. Scotland Yard recruited 1,300 police in 1969, giving a surplus over resignations and retirements of about 300, and they expected similar results for 1971.

Police are having scant success in recruiting two kinds of men they particularly want — university graduates and nonwhites. Graduates are needed to meet administrative demands, to deal with such complex offenses as fraud and price-rigging and to use scientific detection aids.

A program to lure graduates with quick promotions brought in four men this year. The Police Federation called it a fiasco costing $33,600 a year for the first three years.

Attempts to sign up immigrants have been even less successful. The total of fewer than 25 nonwhite policemen in Britain reflects the bafflement with which police and immigrants face each other.

Police say the crime rate is low in most immigrant neighborhoods, except for a trouble-seeking minority.

But Gale admits, "The cop is just as bewildered at times as the immigrant. We are trying hard to get a form of communication at the grass roots level."

Police in most areas say they would welcome nonwhite recruits for duty in both white and nonwhite communities.

Older policemen, used to ups and downs in the popularity of the force, take a detached view of the present problems. They are confident that the vast majority of the public supports them and that conditions will improve in time.

"Anyone joining the force has a good future to look forward to," said Detective Sgt. Paul Gibbins, who has 14 commendations and a file of promotions passed up so he could stay "out in the field, ferreting about.

"Crime is on the increase and pay and conditions for police will be better than ever before," he said.

Garrulous Gene won the trump lead with his seven spot and promptly informed one and all that he hadn't bid enough. North shuddered. He had previous experience with Gene and hoped the slam could not be lost.

His fears were justified. At trick two Gene led a heart to dummy's ace and returned a heart to his king. West plunked the four of spades on the king and led his last trump.

The silence for the next five minutes was deafening as Gene struggled to salvage the slam, but his 12th trick had departed for never-never land at trick three.

"Nothing ever breaks for me," moaned Gene.

"Something is likely to," said North, "the next time you open your silly mouth to spout an inanity and then chuck the contract. I am likely to break your neck."

Do you see how South should have played the hand?

He should have forgotten about seven and played safe for six by letting East hold the second heart. Nothing could hurt him after that. Even if East had a second trump to lead South would still have been able to ruff two hearts in dummy and would wind up scoring his own five trumps, two ruffs, two high hearts, the ace of diamonds and the ace and king of clubs.

In Friday's Action

Ind., Kan., Ill., Ohio Win Opening Games

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

Three tight games and one seesaw battle highlighted the opening round of the Central Sectional Senior Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament Friday at Liberty Park Stadium.

Robert Hoenig dropped Minnesota to the losers' bracket as he swatted a ninth-inning home run and enabled Kansas to take a 2-1 win behind the four-hit pitching of Steve McKinney, after McKinney was touched for two hits and allowed the lone Minnesota run to come home when he hit a batsman in the first with the bases loaded.

Other action Friday saw Indiana rally for three runs in the first and add another in the third to squeeze out a 4-1 score over Missouri.

Storm Club of Ohio spotted Michigan a 6-2 lead in the top of third, but the Ohioans came back with three runs in the third and two more in the sixth to win a come-from-behind, 7-6 victory.

Minnesota loaded the bases in the home half of the first and scored their lone run of the contest when Scott Hoberg was hit by a pitched ball.

Kansas loaded the bases themselves in the top of the second and pitcher Steve McKinney tied the score at 1-1 by lacing a single between short and third.

With two out in the bottom of the fifth, Mike Howard walked and stole second for Minnesota. Lee Beaudry advanced Howard to third on an infield hit, but Bill Sorenson grounded out to third, leaving the score knotted at 1-1.

McKinney picked up his second hit of the game when he singled past the shortstop in the top of the seventh with two out.

Kansas had a chance to score the go-ahead run in the top of the eighth as Robert Ohm beat out an infield hit, Doug Ray sacrificed him to second. However, Mike Asbell popped out before Glen Jacobs was issued an intentional pass and Mike Lichtenberger forced Jacobs at second.

Mike Howard opened Minnesota's half of the eighth with a single into right field. A wild pitch by McKinney sent him to second. Lee Beauday earned an intentional pass sending Bill Sorenson to the plate with runners at first and second with none out.

Sorenson popped an attempted bunt to third, but a bad throw to second in an attempt to double up Howard went into right field, sending Howard to third.

Hoberg was walked intentionally by McKinney to load the bases and Keith McGregor was retired on strikes.

That brought pitcher Bruce Olson to the plate with a chance to win the game himself. But he lofted a fly ball to center fielder Mike Asbell, who hauled in the ball and killed the Minnesota threat.

Robert Hoenig followed Bill Montgomery's fly out to right field with a solo home run, the first ever in Central Sectional play here, and moved Kansas on top, 2-1, in the ninth.

Pitcher Steve McKinney added his third single of the day and advanced to second on a ground out by Kenny Brane before Ohm flied out to left for the final out of the inning.

Michigan pitcher Mike Fricke put himself on the ropes in the first inning against Storm Club of Ohio as he walked the first two men he faced in the game. A pair of sacrifices gave the Ohioans their first tally and a single by Jack Land accounted for the second and final run of the inning.

Michigan came up with six big runs in the top of the third off Ohio starter Mike Weiss. Weiss, who had retired the first six batters he faced in the first and second, walked the first two batters in the inning; both of them later scored. Another run scored on an error, but the big blow came off the bat of Scott Burns, who swatted a three-run, inside the park homer to give Michigan a commanding 6-2, lead.

The Storm Club lived up to their name in the bottom of the inning, however, as they rallied for three runs of their own and knocked starting Michigan pitcher Mike Fricke off the mound. Fricke took over the fielding duties in right field, while third baseman Gary Bennett came on in relief.

In the following inning, Fricke came back to the mound to take over the pitching assignment.

Ohio placed runners on first and second with only one out in the fifth, but Fricke retired pinch hitter Steve Daugherty on a pop fly and got Weiss to ground out to the shortstop, leaving Michigan on top, 6-5, through five innings of play.

Jim Berry came in on in relief of Fricke in the bottom of the sixth with none out and a runner at first. Berry walked Greg Sewell, putting runners at first and second. Eric Wirtz then struck out, but Berry loaded the bases by walking Mike Gurley.

Jack Land, who had four hits in the game for the Storm Club, then bounced a single into left that drove in his third and fourth runs of the game and gave Ohio a 7-6 lead, a lead they held on to to give Weiss the victory.

Starting Missouri pitcher Don Dillahunty was tagged for three runs on four hits in the top of the first as Indiana jumped quickly out in front.

Indiana scored another run in their half of the third to stake pitcher Gary Govert to a 4-0 lead.

Missouri mounted their first big threat of the game in the bottom of the fourth placing runners at second and third with only one out. After Dave Sego forced one of the runners at second, Charles Johnson dumped a single into short right field to drive in the only Missouri run of the game. Rick Strobbe struck out to end the inning.

Although being charged with the loss, Dillahunty struck out 12 Indiana batters, ten in the last six innings. He struck out the side in the sixth and seventh inning, as well.

Indiana was only able to scratch out one more hit after their four-run attack in the first frame.

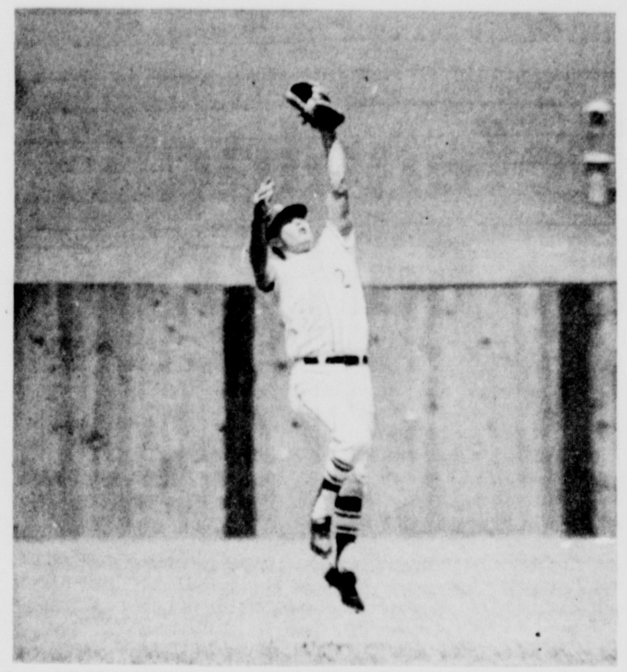

Keith Moore was the winning pitcher for Indiana; he relieved Govert in the bottom of the fifth.

Bob Pledge, who drew the starting nod from manager Charles Huddleston against defending champion Brookfield, Ill., in Friday's final game, was tagged for only three hits in the game, but Illinois made use of them, scoring twice in the top of the third inning on a lone hit.

Winning pitcher Dave Wehrmeister along with teammate Bob Szczecinski came across the plate in the frame for the only two runs of the ball game and captured a 2-0 decision, dropping host Sedalia into the losers' bracket.

Wehrmeister, who was the winning pitcher in last year's championship game of the Central Sectional over Storm Club of Ohio, checked the locals on only two hits. Bob Pledge and Steve Holmes picked up singles in the fourth inning.

Wehrmeister struck out eight of the first nine batters he faced. For the game, the LaGrange, Ill., righthander sent 16 Sedalia batters back to the dugout on strikes. First baseman Steve Eck was the only Sedalian not to be struck out by Wehrmeister.

Pilot Grove To Play Dr. Pepper

The Sedalia Dr. Pepper softball team will host Pilot Grove in a doubleheader at 7 p.m. in Housel Park.

Rain postponed the twinbill scheduled Thursday night at Cleark Creek; it was the eighth time that rain or wet grounds have caused postponements for Dr. Pepper this season.

Dr. Pepper will travel to Marshall Tuesday for a twinbill with International Shoe Co.; the first contest will begin at 7:30 p.m.

'Dirty Game,' Brockington

All-Stars Stay Close But Drop 24-17 Score

CHICAGO (AP) — The College All Stars learned they have a lot to learn following their 24-17 loss to the Baltimore Colts Friday night and John Brockington, the running back from Ohio State, has learned the fastest.

"It's a dog game, a dirty dog game," said Brockington who scored the All-Stars' first touchdown on a power sweep in the second quarter.

"I learned how dirty a game it was when we scrimmaged the Bears," added Brockington, who joins the Green Bay Packers. "You can't play it the way you play in college."

Mistakes, penalties and lack of field position led to the All Stars downfall.

"I'm proud of this team," said Coach Blanton Collier. "We made too many mistakes, especially in drawing penalties, but the Colts didn't intimidate us physically. We had poor field position early in the game—and they got a touchdown before we could get our feet wet.

"Then we settled down, but we couldn't make the big play. Their attitude was good and a lot of them are going to become great pro players."

Heisman Trophy winner Jim Plunkett of Stanford said, "The penalties killed us."

"It was difficult to run against them and difficult to pass against them," he added. "I guess that's why we didn't win. We have a lot to learn and it showed tonight."

Dan Pastorini, the quarterback from Santa Clara, who outgained Brockington 40 yards to 27 to top All-Star rushers, agreed "we sure got a lot to learn." Pastorini's ground yardage came mainly because he bobbled a punt attempt and then raced 28 yards for a first down.

"Baltimore is a great team," he said, "but I'd like to see this team play them again in four years."

Why four years? "By then we would have some experience," he said. "We couldn't find the pass openings if they were there. They have a good pass rush, but it was hard to get the feel of things by playing a little and then watching from the bench. I'm sure Jim (Plunkett) feels the same way.

"In the long run I think a lack of field position hurt us the most," continued Pastorini. "That Mike Curtis (the Colts' middle linebacker) is really something. With him in there they don't need the other linebackers."

"I hate to lose, but if you're going to lose it might as well be to the best."

The Baltimore Colts' Don McCafferty declared "It was frustrating."

"We'd get a drive going and hope we'd score so we could get a chance to use some of the kids and then something would happen."

"That front four came hard, all of them," praised quarterback Earl Morrall, adding that he felt the sting of the collegians' rush more than he had anticipated.

Fabulous Derr Racing Team Returns

Without the Ernie Derr Dodge Racing Team at the Missouri State Fair, the Fair wouldn't mean much to some people.

However, such will not be the case during the 1971 Missouri State Fair as the father-son duo of Ernie and Mike Derr will be here as the International Motor Contest Association stock cars roll on the half-mile and mile ovals in this year's IMCA races.

Father Ernie, who has racked up more than 300 wins in his stunning career, is the 11-time IMCA stock car champion. Last season he won his sixth straight title and his tenth in the last 12 years.

Derr first won the IMCA stock car title in 1953 behind the wheel of an Oldsmobile. After a five-year drouth that saw Don White and Johnnie Beauchamp win back-to-back national championships in 1954-55 and 1956-1957 respectively, Derr snaired his second championship in 1959. Don White was again the champion in 1958.

Since 1959, only Dick Hutcherson has been able to break the Derr string of IMCA championship titles. Hutcherson won the 1963 and 1964 championships.

Going into the 1971 IMCA season, the "Master of the Dirt Oval" had recorded 294 victories, most of which have been during IMCA races. He has added four more IMCA victories to his credit so far this season. One of those came on May 2 at I-70 Speedway near Odessa in the Missouri 200.

His other wins to date this year on the IMCA's circuit came at Topeka, Kan. on May 30, again at Topeka on July 4 and in Cresco, Iowa on July 23.

Before arriving at Sedalia for stock car competition at the Fair here, he is expected to participate in IMCA racing events at Burlington, Iowa and Wausau, Wis.

Although Derr has copped 11 national IMCA titles, his record in the richest stock car race at the Missouri State Fair, the 100-mile Missouri International, has not been like one might think.

Derr has been only able to win one coveted Missouri International title; that victory came in 1969.

He did, however, place second in 1968 and third in 1967.

Hie 23-year-old son Mike carried the bulk of the mail during the 1970 Missouri State Fair stock car races. He placed third in the Missouri International, before turning around and winning the night stock car show on the half-mile track.

For Mike, the win on Aug. 29 on the Sedalia oval marks as the only IMCA feature victory of his career. The points he picked up that night aided the younger Derr to finish in 11th spot in the IMCA stock car point standings in 1970.

Ernie Derr's record over the years has been nothing short of sensational. Last season, for example, he participated in 33 IMCA events, winning 19 and placing in the top four payoff positions 29 times.

Derr has also carved some impressive marks on the two Sedalia tracks. He currently holds the world and track records for a one-mile, semi-banked dirt track for a stock car. His clocking of :39.90 ranks as the fastest ever here in both departments.

He also holds three marks on the smaller one-half mile oval. Those records include the one-lap record (:25.72), the five-lap record (2:15.07) and the ten-lap standard (4:22.27).

Stock car races on the half-mile track will be held the afternoon of Aug. 22, with night races on the half-mile track set for Aug. 28.

The 100-mile Missouri International for stock cars will be held the afternoon of Aug. 28 on the mile track.

Father, Son Combination

Veteran International Motor Contest Association stock car king Ernie Derr (left) and his 23-year-old son Mike have been slated for the stock car events at the Missouri State Fair, which opens Aug. 21 in Sedalia. Derr has captured 11 national stock car titles with the IMCA during his career, and won the Missouri International for stock cars at the Fairgrounds in 1969. Mike has had only one feature win with the IMCA in his short racing career; that came last year on the Sedalia half-mile track.

Locals Down Clay-Platte To Stay In Tournament

Sedalia stayed alive in the Central Sectional Senior Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament Saturday afternoon by whipping Clay-Platte, the Missouri entry, 4-1.

Sedalia spotted Clay-Platte a run in the top of the third, but came back with a piar of their own in the bottom of the inning, added lone runs in the fourth and fifth and earned the right to play Iowa in Saturday night's 9 p.m. contest in the losers' bracket of the double-elimination tourney.

Steve Eck scattered six hits in the game for Sedalia and was credited with the victory; Gary Griggs started and traveled through five innings for Missouri. He was charged with the loss.

Chuck Huddleston led off Sedalia's half of the first by singling between short and second. The locals went on to load the bases, but were unable to score as Griggs worked out of his first jam of the game.

Catcher Steve Herzberg kept the Sedalia bats ringing in the bottom of the second as he drilled a single through the hole between shortstop and third.

Griggs then walked Randy Smith to put runners at first and second and send pitcher Steve Eck to the plate. Eck forced Herzberg at third with a grounder to the shortstop.

Griggs again loaded the bases by walking Huddleston. That brought Missouri Manager Robert Ludwig to the mound to talk the situation over with Griggs. Griggs remained in the game and promptly struck out Derrick Crank and Steve Gerlecz as the second Sedalia threat went down the drain.

Missouri put runners at first and third with two out in the visitors half of the third and Bill Harvey dropped a single on the left field line to score Alan Parks, but Mike Ludwig was tagged out at third on the play.

Bob Pledge reached first in the bottom of the third as he struck out, but the catcher couldn't hold onto the ball. Griggs then walked Steve Holmes for the second time in the game.

Dennis McFarland hit into a sacrifice that moved the runners to second and third. Steve Herzberg drove in the tying and leading runs with a single off the glove of the left fielder Rick Strobbe. Randy Smith lofted another fly ball into left that Strobbe dropped for an error, but Herzberg was forced at second on the throw.

Eck was hit by a pitch again giving Sedalia runners at first second, but Huddleston's ground ball to third forcing Smith ended the inning.

Derrick Crank gave Sedalia yet another leadoff runner in the fourth as he beat out an infield hit, but was later caught trying to steal second.

Steve Gerlecz drilled a double off the left field wall and scored on Pledge's single up the middle. Steve Holmes drilled a line drive back to Griggs, but Griggs hit Ralph Perri on the helmet putting base runners at first and second. Steve Herzberg struck out, giving Sedalia a 3-1 advantage at the end of four.

Randy Smith put Sedalia in scoring position as he led off the fifth with an infield hit, giving the locals at least one base hit in each of the first five innings. Smith moved to second on a stolen base after Eck had flied out to right.

Huddleston walked sending Crank to the plate, who hit into a force play at third. Third Baseman Dave Sego's throw to first for the double play was high allowing Huddleston to move to third and advancing Crank to second.

Griggs loaded the bases by walking Gerlecz. Pledge was issued a free pass, scoring Huddleston and giving Sedalia their final run of the game.

Momentary Dejection

Nicklaus-Palmer Up By 4 Strokes

By BOB GREEN . . . . .
Associated Press Golf Writer

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus each scored four birdies Saturday as they combined for a 64 and a whopping four-stroke lead midway through the rain-delayed $200,000 PGA National Team Championship.

Palmer and Nicklaus, the defending champions and pre-tourney favorites had a 36-hole total of 126, a record for this championship in which scoring is based on the better ball of each team on each hole.

They were 16 under par after two soggy trips over the 7,045-yard par 71 Laurel Valley Golf Club layout, Palmer's home course in the western Pennsylvania hills.

The Hill brothers, Dave and Mike, had a 66 after the tourney suffered its second rain delay Saturday and were a distant second at 130 going into Sunday's 36-hole windup.

Four teams, headed by National Seniors champ Julius Boros and veteran Bill Collins, were next at 131.

Boros and Collins had a second-round 63. They were tied with Australian Bruce Crampton and Orville Moody; New Zealand left-hander Bob Charles and Aussie Bruce Devlin; and the Lotz brothers, Dick and John.

The Charles-Devlin combo had a 64, the Lotz' a 67 and Crampton-Moody 68.

There was a big group at 132, including former champions George Archer and Bobby Nichols, who had a 68 on the long, wet, heavy course, soaked by a heavy overnight rain that delayed the start of play by four hours.

Thursday's play was rained out entirely, setting up Sunday's double round.

"Don't remind me of it," Palmer groaned after he and Nicklaus took well over five hours to play 18 holes Saturday. "It looks like it could be 10 or 11 hours tomorrow."

The two, who have an unmatched history of success in team events—including four World Cup titles for the United States—have had only one bogey in 36 holes so far.

That came on the par four 12th Saturday when Nicklaus put his drive out of bounds and left it to Arnold.

"I was just thinking about driving the fairway, and I did," Palmer recalled. "But I kind of went to sleep on the second shot. I'd been hitting my irons good, but, well, I pull-hooked it into some trees on the left. I clipped a tree coming out and was short, pitched on and two-putted."

Otherwise they teamed perfectly.

"Sure, I think we can catch 'em," Mike Hill said after he and brother Dave came in four strokes back but alone in second.

"In team play, it's a matter of making birdies. We didn't play very good today, but I think we can make maybe seven birdies a round tomorrow, they might find us sneaking up on 'em."

It took a score of 138 or better to make the cut for the final two rounds. Lee Trevino, the U.S. Canadian and British Open king, and partner Howie Johnson didn't make it.

They could do no better than match par 71 Saturday for 139, one stroke over.

Defending Champs Make Up Early Deficit To Win

Ottumwa, Iowa, had defending Central States Senior Babe Ruth champion Brookfield, Ill., on the ropes but couldn't keep them down as Illinois came back from a 3-1 deficit in the top of the seventh and scored three runs to defeat Iowa 4-3 Saturday afternoon in the Central States Senior Babe Ruth Sectional Tournament.

The win sets up a rematch of last year's championship game this afternoon at 3 p.m. between Storm Club of Ohio and Brookfield in Liberty Park Stadium.

Behind by the score of 3-1 in the top of the seventh, Frank Hernandez opened Illinois' last chance with a dying single down the third base line. Steve Schroeder flied out behind short, but Rick Ricksecker was issued a walked sending Hernandez to second. Pinch hitter Bill Arndt dumped a single into left field, loading the bases.

Cary Basnar then drove in the go ahead run with another single to right. Ken Schuster and Dave Wehrmeister both popped up to close out the inning.

Things had been going quietly through the first two innings of the game until the top of the third when center fielder Rick Ricksecker led off with a walk and pitcher Craig Bouchard followed with the first hit of the game, a bunt single, which sent Ricksecker to second.

Bob Szczecinski lined a single down the left field line that scored Ricksecker. Iowa third baseman Buster Sapp cut off the throw coming in from the outfield and eventually tagged Bouchard who was trapped between second and third. Szczecinski ended up at second on the play.

Cary Basnar then flied out to short center field for the second out before Ken Schuster lofted a fly to left for the frame's final out.

Mike Heckhart got the first hit of the game for Iowa as he led off the fourth with an infield hit that Hernandez fielded deep in the hole between first and second. Heckhart had the throw beaten and went on to second when Hernandez peg to first was wide of its mark. Heckhart came home as Dan Watts pounded a double into left field.

Buster Sapp moved to third with an infield hit, putting runners at the corners with none out. Sapp got to second on a stolen base.

Tom Shepard struck out for the first out of the inning, but pitcher Craig Bouchard loaded the bases by walking Jeff Pierson.

Bouchard then walked Denny Paxton, giving Iowa a 2-1 lead. Rick Anderson struck out, but Bouchard's next four pitches were balls walking Chris Jones and scoring Sapp as the bases remained filled. Steve Holmes then popped up to the third baseman for the final out, but the damage had already been done as Ottumwa, Iowa moved out in front, 3-1. However, the three big runs in the seventh for Illinois wiped out the deficit.

Gary Jindra then came in to pitch for Illinois, retired Chris Jones on strikes and got Holmes to ground out to first before striking out Mike Heckhart to end the game and advance Illinois into today's 3 p.m. game.

Gary Jindra picked up the win, facing only the three Iowa batters in the bottom of the seventh. Tom Shepard, who relieved Iowa starter Roger Wollums in the fourth, was tagged with the loss.

CARROLLTON — The Sedalia American Little League All-Stars advanced to Sectional competition by defeating the Carroll County squad 5-4 in a hard fought contest here yesterday afternoon.

Errors proved to be the deciding factor as the Sedalia squad played perfect ball while their opponents bobbled six different times.

Kelly Shepard, who was credited with the win in relief, knocked in the winning run in the fifth stanza, scoring Rex Rudy from third.

Mike Ulmer got the first hit of the game with a single, and then scored when Jim Gill got to first on a error. Gill scored later in the inning on a wild pitch.

Sedalia picked up another pair of runs in the fourth. Shepard started the uprising when he was hit by a pitched ball. Rex Rudy beat out an infield grounder, advancing Shepard to third.

When Mike Fall hit a grounder to the shortstop, the the throw to home got away from the catcher, allowing both Shepard and Rudy to score. Carroll County's hurler, Monty Shields, retired the next three batters to end the inning.

The third inning saw Carroll County pick up three runs on as many hits, while the game's lone home run came in the fourth off John Daugherty's wallop for Carroll County. The RBI in the fifth was the deciding run

Washington Edges Out Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dick Billings' single in the eighth inning drove in Larry Biitner with the tie-breaking run and gave the Washington Senators a 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

Biittner had opened the eighth with a bloop double into center field. Billings followed with a ground ball that skipped past Brewer first baseman Frank Tepedino and went down the line for a hit.

Brewer Manager Dave Bristol was ejected from the game in the eighth inning for protesting a call at second, when Frank Tepedino was out stealing.

Jones and Orton In Death Match

Rufus Jones, winner over Baron Von Raschke last week, will return to the Convention Hall ring Tuesday night for another "death match" showdown.

The 280-pounder is pitted against Bob Orton in a clash in which there will be no time limit and no disqualification. Action will continue until one of the participants yields or fails to answer the bell.

Jones was to have met Harley Race, but the latter was forced off the program because of an illness in his family.

Danny Little Bear will test Tor Kamata in Tuesday's semifinal event.

Also scheduled are matches between Buddy Austin and George Hultz, and Greg Valentine and Ronnie Etchison.

All-Stars Scatter To Camps

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard Harris, 265-pound defensive end from Grambling, carried the highest honors Saturday as he and his All-Star buddies scattered to pro training camps to begin learning the real facts of football life.

Harris starts earning his keep with the Philadelphia Eagles after being voted by writers and broadcasters the Most Voluable Player of the collegians in their televised 24-17 loss to the world champion Baltimore Colts Friday night before 52,289 gans in Soldier Field.

Thirteen different players received votes, only four on offense, but the 6-foot-4 Harris led by a comfortable margin. Linebacker Charles Weaver of Southern California and the Detroit Lions was second, and defensive end Jack Youngblood of Florida and the Los Angeles Rams was third.

Others receiving votes were:

Offense-Quarterbacks Jim Plunkett, Stanford-Boston Patriots and Dan Pastorini, Santa Clara—Houston Oilers, J.D. Hill., Arizona State-Buffalo Bills, and John Brockington, Ohio State-Green Bay Packers.

Defense—Jack Tatum, Ohio State—Oakland Raiders, Julius Adams, Texas Southern-Patriots, Jack Ham, Penn State-Pittsburgh Steelers, Isaiah Robertson, Southern U.-Rams, Ronnie Hornsby; Southeast Louisiana-New York Giants and Bob Bell, Cincinnati-Lions.

It was befitting that the All-Star defensive corps, whose line was coached by Willie Davis, dragged down the most mention. They held the Colts to 60 yards on the ground.

Plunkett and Pastorini were of target and only 8 of 24 passes were completed for 78 yards.

The 37-year-old Morrall hit on 20 of 30 tosses for 329 yards and three touchdowns to assure the pros of their eighth straight victory in the series.

Bob Vogel, Colt's left tackle who had to block Harris, said:

"The guy is a load. He really had me scrambling. If he doesn't make it with the pros, nobody will."

Blanton Collier, who came out of retirement to make his debut as All-Star head coach, said, "I'm proud of this team. We made a lot of errors. We couldn't get field position. But we were aggressive. And we went after them. We weren't intimidated."

A's Bomb Cleveland With Hits

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rick Monday drove in three runs with two homers and Gene Tenace laced a two-run homer and a run-scoring double, powering the Oakland A's past the Cleveland Indians 9-1 Saturday.

Monday's first homer came in the sixth inning with Bert Campaneris aboard and wiped out a 1-0 lead Cleveland held since the first inning. Monday then delivered his 12th circuit shot of the year to highlight a two-run Oakland ninth.

Tenace smashed a two-run homer in the seventh to give Oakland a 4-1 lead and the A's erupted for three more in the eighth, two on Sal Bando's single and another on Tenace's double.

Winner Chuck Dobson, 10-1, scattered five hits, including Eddie Leon's first-inning homer.

Sadecki Hurls Through Jam To Aid Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Grote and Bud Harrelson keyed a two-run seventh inning with run-scoring hits and Ray Sadecki pitched out of a late jam to lead the New York Mets to a 5-2 triumph over the Chicago Cubs Saturday.

Grote's run-scoring double and Harrelson's RBI single gave the Mets a 4-0 advantage and helped Sadecki withstand a two-run Cubs' rally in the eighth.

Sadecki, 5-3, was sailing along with a four-hit, eight-strikeout performance when Chicago tagged the Mets' lefthander for three hits, including Glenn Beckert's two run-double. But Sadecki killed the rally by getting Jim Hickman to fly to center for the last out.

Royals Fall To Baltimore, 4-0

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore right-hander Pat Dobson blanked the Kansas City Royals on five hits Saturday night to win his 15th game and 12th straight—the longest victory string among American League hurlers this year.

Dobson, who has lost only four times, struck out five and allowed only two runners to reach second as he hurled his ninth complete game.

The Orioles scored three runs off Bruce Dal Canton, 8-5, on singles by Mark Belanger, Boog Powell and Merv Rettenmund and Brooks Robinson's double.

They added the final run in the fourth when Brooks Robinson singled, Dave Johnson walked and Dobson scored Robinson with a single to left.

No - Hitter By Cochell

Grosse Pointe, Mich., pounced on Iowa starter Dan Watts for seven runs on four hits in the bottom of the first inning and coasted to an easy 9-0 victory in losers' bracket play of the Central Sectional Senior Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament Saturday night in Liberty Park Stadium.

Michigan paraded 10 men to the plate in the seven run uprising and moved into Sunday's 7 p.m. contest to face the losers of the Indiana-Kansas game, which will be played today at 1 p.m.

Dick Cochell, who was struck in the face by a pitched ball delivered by Iowa hurler Dan Watts in the first inning, tossed a no-hitter in picking up the shutout for Michigan.

Cochell faced 25 batters in the game; four runners reached first on walks issued by Cochell, while another made it to first on an error by shortstop Gary Bennett in the seventh.

Lonborg's 3-Hitter Ends Chisox Streak

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Lonborg pitched no-hit ball for 6 2-3 innings and wound up with a three-hitter, while Duane Josephson drove in four runs with a home run and a double as the Boston Red Sox ended Chicago's six-game winning streak, blanking the White Sox 6-0 Saturday.

The triumph also ended a four-game Boston losing streak and was achieved without the services of Carl Yastrzemski, who was benched for the first time in his 11-year career.

Manager Eddie Kasko sat down the $150,000-a-year star who had only three hits in 27 at bats because "he's all mixed up and trying to do it all himself. Maybe a rest will help."

Lonborg, 6-4, who had a no-hitter until Bill Melton singled with two out in the seventh. The only other Chicago hits were Jerry Morales' single in the eight and Pat Kelly's single in the ninth.

Boston opened the decisive fifth inning with Phil Gagliano and Joe Lahoud drawing walks before Josephson cracked Tommy John's next pitch for his seventh homer of the year. Singles by Lonborg and John Kennedy plus a sacrifice fly by Luis Aparicio added another run.

Reggie Smith, who had four hits, doubled home a run in the seventh and Josephson doubled in a run in the eighth.

Hunt Ties Record For Being Hit

MONTREAL (AP) — Ron Hunt, tying a modern major league record by being hit with a pitch for the 31st time this season, keyed a four-run fourth inning that carried the Montreal Expos to a 6-4 triumph over the Houston Astros Saturday night.

Houston's Jack Billingham had retired nine straight batters before hitting Hunt to lead off the fourth. It tied the record set by Louis Richard Steve Evans of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1910.

Billingham then gave up consecutive singles to Boots Day, Rusty Staub, Ron Fairly, Bob Bailey and Jim Gosger.

Montreal added a run in the fifth on Staub's RBI single, but the Astros came back with two in the sixth on Joe Morgan's two-run homer.

Blyleven Tops Yankees For Eighth Victory

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP) — Bert Blyleven, unsuccessful in his previous eight tries for his eighth victory, beat the New York Yankees with a 5-4 eight-hitter for the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

Blyleven, who last won June 15, struck out eight while the Twins supported him with an 11-hit attack.

The Twins rocked loser Steve Kline, 8-10, with a three-run first. Cesar Tovar started it with a double, took third on Rod Carew's bunt single and scored on Harmon Killebrew's sacrifice fly.

Tony Oliva singled and Rich Reese walked to load the bases before a run-scoring single by Leo Cardenas and a bases-loaded walk to Jim Nettles.

Kansas State rookie quarterback Lynn Dickey threw a 49-yard touchdown pass to Charlie Joiner for Houston as Ed Hughes also made his pro head coaching debut.

The annual pro football Hall of Fame game, was held before a record standing-room-only crowd of 19,384, after the late Vince Lombardi and Bill Hewitt, Jimmy Brown, Y.A. Title, Frank Kinard, Norm Van Brocklin and Andy Robustelli were inducted into the hall.

Walton, trying to become the third black quarterback to play in the National Football League, tossed a nine-yard pass to veteran Bob Klein for a 7-0 halftime lead. He boosted that to 14-0 in the third period on a 33-yard aeril to rookie Randy Vataha, who had been Jim Plunkett's favorite target at Stanford.

Other runners are: Raul Sanhouse (441) Venezuela; Felipe Cigal (362), Mexico; John Smith (312), U.S.A.; Roberto Hogar (108), Argentina, and Ian Gordon (150), Canada. (UPI)

Argentina Dominates Pan-American Games

CALI, Colombia (AP) — Pat Matzdorf of Sheboygan, Wis., world record-setter competing with a stomach ailment, gave the United States its first gold medal Saturday night when he won the high jump in the sixth Pan-American Games.

The 20-year-old University of Wisconsin student tied with Canada's Wilf Wedmann at 6 feet, 10¾ inches but was awarded first place on the fewer number of misses.

The winning jump fell well below Matzdorf's pending record of 7-6¼ set in the USA-USSR Track and Field Meet this summer.

Luis Arbulu of Peru won the bronze medal with 6-8¾.

The long-haired athlete's victory, coming two hours before midnight on this opening day of competititon of the pre-Olympic carnival, ended a long, nervous wait by the might U.S. giant which collected 262 gold medals four years ago at Winnipeg, Canada.

Argentina's sweep of the first three events in rowing—including an impressive triumph by world champion Sculler Alberto Demiddi—a Pan-Am record by Carmen Romero of Cuba in the women's discus and weight-lifting exploits by musclemen of host Colombia, Canada and little Netherland Antilles had marked the long humid day in this equatorial city.

Miss Romero won the discus with a heave of 187 feet, 3 inches, wiping out the 8-year-old Pan-Am mark of 164-7 set by Nancy McCredie of Canada.

Another Cuban, Maria Betancourt, was second with 169-9½ and Canada's Carol Martin took the bronze with 164-2. America's Renee Kletchka of Lincoln, Neb., came in fifth with 151-10.

The brightest showing for the Americans came from slender, 108-pound Linda Jo Metheny of Tuscola, Ill., who stepped off to an early lead in women's gymnastics, and a 21-year-old South Carolina convict who won his first boxing contest.

Also in the first head-to-head confrontation of the United States and Cuba, the American women's basketball team scored a 63-62 upset triumph when Janice Beach of Elmer, Okla., hit from the floor at the game-ending buzzer.

The Argentinians also captured the fours with coxswain and the pairs without cox in the first three of seven rowing finals. The United States, which normally dominates crew racing, had to settle for a silver and two bronze medals.

Miss Metheny, the top gold medalist in the 1967 games at Winnipeg, swept into the overall lead in the compulsory phase of women's gymnastics with 36.70 points.

She had a .30 lead over her 16-year-old rival, Roxanne Pierce of Kensington, Md. Miss Metheny was the lone competitor to score at least nine points in each of the four categories—side horse vault, balance beam, free exercise and uneven parallel bar. The championship will be decided with the optional exercises Monday.

Argentina's world champion sculler, Alberto Demiddi, gave an impressive performance as he won the single sculls by some 50 yards over Bill Tytus of Seattle, a former University of Washington oarsman.

Carner's Putting Is Key

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Long-hitting JoAnne Carner rode a blazing putter to a one-under-par 71 and a two-stroke lead Saturday in the second round of the $25,000 Bluegrass Invitational Golf Tournament.

Trailing by two strokes with 36-hole totals of 144 were Sandra Haynie and Sandra Spuzich, co-leaders with Sherry Wilder after the first round. Miss Wilder ballooned to a 77 Saturday for a 147 total.

Kathy Whitworth, the tour's leading money winner, shot her second consecutive 73 and stood four stokes off the pace along with Jane Blalock and Murle Breer.

The 54-hole event concludes Sunday, with the winner to pick up $3,750.

Miss Carner sank putts of 30, 50, 22, and 35 feet en route to her one-under par round over the 6,589-yard Hunting Creek Country Club couse. She had four birdies and three bogeys and said, "Off the tee, I hit the ball awful."

She said that she changed her grip on the 14th hole, then began hitting the ball better.

Angels Edge Detroit On Moses' Hit

DETROIT (AP) — Gerry Moses slammed a run-scoring double off the left center field wall in the 12th inning, giving Clyde Wright and the California Angels a 3-2 victory over Mickey Lolich and the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

Lolich, 16-8, who struck out 14 and yielded nine hits, and Wright, 10-10, who yielded only six hits, were locked in a brilliant pitcher's duel until Syd O'Brien got a hit off the glove of second baseman Tony Taylor with two out in the 12th. Moses followed with his long double, scoring O'Brien.

Wright worked 11 1-3 innings before being relieved by Lloyd Allen after Ike Brown's pinch single with one out in the 12th.

Allen wild pitched Brown to second, balked him to third and walked Gates Brown, but got out of the jam when Tony Taylor, attempting a squeeze bunt, popped to first baseman Jim Spencer. Spencer fired to third baseman Ken McMullen, doubling Ike Brown off third.

Grand Slam By Rookie Foils Bucs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rookie Dave Kignman's grand-slam homerun and Bobby Bonds' two-run double highlighted a seven-run, seventh-inning rally that powered the San Francisco Giants to a 15-11 victory over Pittsburgh Saturday despite two homers and five RBI's by the Pirates' Willie Stargell.

The Giants, who trailed by five runs at one stage, entered the seventh tied 8-8. Singles by Jimmy Rosario, Hal Lanier and pinch-hitter Frank Duffy loaded the bases off reliever Dave Guisti, 4-4.

Bonds' double gave the Giants the lead and Kingman blasted his first major league homer following an intentional walk to Ken Henderson. Don McMahon, 9-3, was the winner in relief.

Al Oliver's single and Stargell's two-run homer opened the scoring in the first. Bob Robertson followed with his 22nd homer for a 3-0 lead. Stargell added a three-run homer in the eighth, giving him 36 homers and 98 runs batted in.

Petty Nears $1,000,000 In Winnings

ATLANTA (AP) — Insisting he's still a "poor ole country boy trying to keep my head above water," Richard Petty is almost certain to become a member Sunday of auto racing's most exclusive club — the small circle of million dollar winners.

"I'm not too hepped up over the prospect," the lanky, curly-haired driver from Randleman, NC., said. "I just want to win the race. After all, it took me 14 years to get close to a million."

Petty, the top dog in stock car racing with 133 career Grand National victories—almost twice as many as any present or past driver—starts his Plymouth in the second row of Sunday's 40-car Dixie 500 starting field.

He needs to finish eighth or better and win $2,357 to top the $1 million mark in career prize money, though his official money doesn't include guarantees over the years from promoters, endorsements or sponsorships of his racing cars.

Petty is in the midst of his best season in racing. He has banked $168,735 from 14 triumphs and consistent finishes in the top 10 in 31 races, and admits he's aiming for the $200,000 mark this year. Rain canceled the final day of qualifying Saturday and posed a threat to the 12th running of the event Sunday. The track, 30 miles south of Atlanta, has been plagued over the years by bad weather.

Fourteen of the 22 events scheduled at the track have been postponed, and inclement weather has interfered with others.

If the weather permits, Sunday's 1 p.m. start will find Petty's protege and sidekick, the tall and strong Buddy Baker, in the pole position after qualifying at a speed of 155.796 miles per hour in a Dodge that Petty owns.

Organizational Meeting Is Set

An organizational meeting to establish a local officials association will be held in the State Fair Community College student union Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

The association is being formed for baseball, basketball and football officials.

All persons who are currently registered in any of these sports or those who are interested in becoming an official are invited to attend.

At Deadline

Paul Biedler of Minnesota was working on a one-hit shutout through four innings of the Sedalia-Minnesota game at Liberty Park Stadium in the Central Sectional Senior Babe Ruth Tournament at Democrat-Capital presstime Saturday night.

Minnesota scored once in the second and four times in the fourth to account for their lead. Randy Kidwell, who came on in relief for starter Jim Lewis, had gotten the only hit for Sedalia through the first four.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia Phillies were tied 4-4 in the 15th inning Saturday night. Lou Brock's two-run homer for the Cards in the ninth sent the game into extra innings.

New Record At Odessa

ODESSA, Mo. (AP) — Joe Ruttman, Dearborn, Mich., and Dick Trickle, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., broke the one-lap record time at the I-70 Speedway within minutes of each other at the National Championship stock car races Saturday night.

Ruttman sped around the half-mile banked oval in 18.88 seconds, bettering by a half-second the previous track standard, which didn't stand long.

The records came in qualifying for Sunday night's $21,000 150-mile national championships.

A 40-car field, led by Ruttman, Terry Bivins of Shawnee, Kan., Tom Reffner of Rudolph, Wis., Dale Wall of Kansas City, Kan., and Don Conner of Kansas City, Kan., is expected to battle for the $3,000 first prize and $2,100 in lap money before a predicted crowd of 10,000.

Pettis County Post No. 16, American Legion, will hold a joint COVERED DISH DINNER and INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS at the Legion Hall on Monday, Aug. 2, at 6:30 p.m. All Legionnaires and their wives are urged to attend this special event of the year. Bring a covered dish.

Mind Your Money

U.S. Power Shortage Is Acute

By Peter Weaver

Electric power blackouts or brownouts can be a consumer's catastrophe. We've become slaves to air conditioners and appliances.

The government's Office of Emergency Preparedness, "Survey of Electric Power Problems," warns: "The electric power supply situation in parts of the United States appears to be worse than last summer."

This means more and more communities will experience sporadic blackouts or brownouts (that's when the lights dim and the TV picture shrinks).

Blackouts, if they last long enough, can damage refrigerated food and can broil or freeze your home, depending on the season. Brownouts are sneakier. They don't turn off equipment but they can burn out air conditioners and other appliances with electric motors.

There are ways to protect yourself. Max Boulin, an electrical engineer who is president of Home Air Conditioning Co., has some suggestions. Boulin knows his stuff. He built and installed the first air conditioner for a presidential car (Harry Truman's).

Unless you buy an expensive standby generator, Boulin says, there's nothing much you can do about a blackout. If the local utility announces in advance that it will cut off electricity the next day for certain hours, you can "store cooling" overnight by turning down the thermostat to 68 degrees or so. It gets a bit chilly but tides you over the afternoon blackout.

As for brownouts caused by low voltage, Boulin suggests the following protective equipment be added to your central air conditioner:

TRIGGER DEVICE: Made by Heineman, Klixon and others, this gadget senses when current gets too high (as the voltage drops). Many air conditioners have sensing devices that cut them off when they get too hot, but Boulin claims they are not as responsive.

TIMER: Carrier makes a "Time-Guard" device which recycles the shutdown air conditioner and turns it back on in five minutes. If the mechanism senses that the voltage is still too low, the timer keeps recycling until the air conditioner is able to safely turn itself on.

EASY STARTER: This package or kit enables the air conditioner to restart itself (on a heavy electricity drain) when voltage is low.

The whole package, Boulin says, costs an average $160 installed in most existing central units. It costs half this price when attached to a newly ordered machine. With window units or any other electirc-motor appliances, Boulin suggests you turn them off in a brownout. It costs too much to protect them otherwise.

Back to blackouts. If you are in an area that experiences repeated loss of electricity or are especially vulnerable to the temporary loss of, say, refrigerated food or a water pump, a standby generator may be in order.

Onan and Kohler make standby generator systems for homes. You can get pamphlets on how they work from local dealers. Onan, for example, has a 5-kilowatt system which will maintain your lights, gas heating or air conditiong (not electric air conditioning), the well pump and also keep a refrigerator or freezer going. This system uses a natural (or bottled) gas motor-generator and costs around $1,000 installed.

If you are apartment hunting, it's a good idea these days to inquire whether the building has its own standby generator to at least maintain hall lights, elevators and heating during a blackout. Some do. Some don't.

To help avoid power shortages, consumers should take steps to eliminate wasteful uses of electricity. Draw sunny side curtains on hot days and regularly clean air conditioner filters. These are just a couple of ideas that will cut waste and save money.

You can get more detailed suggestions in the free pamphlet, "Ways to Use Electricity Efficiently," by writing: Information Office; Tennessee Valley Authority; Knoxville, Tenn. 37902.

Sedalia Man Is Promoted By Airline

(Democrat-Capital Service)

DENVER, Colo. — Clay Blaylock, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Blaylock, Route 5, Sedalia, was named director of general training for Ozark Airlines recently, it was reported by Charles L. Demoney, director of sales for the company.

Blaylock will be responsible for all general training programs except in the maintenance and pilot training fields.

Jakartans Receive Harsh Treatment

JAKARTA (AP) — Military courts have convicted 110 military men in the past five years for a part in the murder of six army generals during the 1965 attempted Communist coup, an army spokesman said today.

The spokesman said 10 of the men were sentenced to death, 20 to life terms and the other 80 to prison terms ranging from 15 to 20 years. He refused to say how many of the 10 have been executed.

The coup in October 1965 was crushed quickly by Maj. Gen. Suharto, then chief of the army strategic reserve command and now president of Indonesia.

Nostalgia May Help TV Series

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — Nostalgia being what it is today, it would not be surprising if a lot of parents joined their children in watching the revived version of "You Are There."

Kids probably will be hearing about how their parents were hooked on this CBS News re-creation of historic events, broadcast on radio from 1945-50 and on television from 1953-57.

The first television version was done live from New York and was directed by Sidney Lumet with John Frankenheimer as his assistant. Both have gone on to become notable film directors.

The early stars included Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Lorne Greene and Rod Steiger.

"They were new faces when we used them," said Walter Cronkite, then as now anchorman. "A lot of them made their first television appearances with us. E. G. Marshall, Kim Stanley, Werver Von Klemperer, Milton Seltzer. Practically everyone on the stage in New York played for us. We were live on Sundays so they could do it."

Then, as in the Saturday morning series to be seen in the fall, great effort was spent to see that the shows were historically authentic.

The series is now being taped at the CBS Broadcast Center and episodes completed are those on Paul Revere, Amelia Earhart and the Alamo.

Cronkite said: "On the Paul Revere ride I set up the situation just as though we were covering it at the time. The reporters are in modern dress, but we go past them pretty quickly so that we don't dwell on that.

"Previously, the reporter was not shown at all. I was a little concerned about this change, but now that I've seen it I think it will work out fine."

Cronkite said the new series will be more authentic than before and will take advantage of all the techniques developed since the earlier version.

"I think it's an absolutely marvelous tool for teaching history. If anything annoys me today about education it's that history should be made dull," he said.

Appeal Is Presented To Move Community

PORT MORESBY, New Guinea (AP) — A Papuan member of the New Guinea House of Representatives appealed to the Australian administration today to move the entire town of Rabaul to a site 20 miles away because of the danger of volcanic eruptions.

Matthias Toliman said Rabaul's people are threatened by eruptions and tidal waves as a result of hundreds of earth tremors and five major earthquakes since July 14. Two persons have died.

Toliman proposed that the townspeople be moved 20 miles east to the small settlement of Kokopo. There was no immediate reaction from the administration.

Rabaul, a town of more than 5,000 people at the northeast end of New Britain island, is surrounded by volcanoes, and an eruption in 1937 killed 600 persons.

Ask Them Yourself

FOR MARJORIE LORD, actress

What is your special advice to an actress who wants to make a success of a career and marriage simultaneously?—R. F. L., Johnson City, Tenn.

● Play comedy roles only! The really serious actress who plays dramatic and tragic parts cannot easily shake herself free of the mood, and too often, when she reaches home, the character is still smoldering within her. It might last all night.

FOR BERT BACHARACH,

Bert

Burt

How come your name is "Bert" and that of your famous son is "Burt?" —Conrad Fiorello, Brooklyn, N.Y.

● My name was Bertram, and it caused me considerable difficulty when I attended grammar school in Atlantic City, N.J. That name was in the same category as "Algernon" or "Percival." It came in for a lot of kidding from schoolmates named "Butch," "Mike" and "Slugger." Years later, when our beautiful blue-eyed boy-infant was born, we wanted to save him from the troubles I had—so we merely changed one letter in the name I'd adopted officially by then, and called him Burt. It has become highly confusing in the past half-dozen years—but we couldn't have predicted that either Bert or Burt would become well-known to other than our immediate neighbors.

FOR TOM COURTENAY,

star of "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich"

In "Otley" you looked so carefree and attractive. I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw you as the prisoner in a Russian slave labor camp. What kind of make-up made you look so gaunt and oppressed?—P. R. Davis, Cleveland, Ohio

● That wasn't make-up, that was me. I lost 40 pounds for the role and removed some caps from my teeth. Several months before we filmed, I steeped myself in the story and lead a very quiet life. Then, too, the temperature dropped as low as 40 below, and I was really reacting to that. I felt very close to the character, Ivan, a simple carpenter, imprisoned unjustly, who manages to survive and even preserve some humanity under degrading, cruel conditions. That feeling was probably reflected in my face.

FOR BOB HOPE

How and when did you get your theme song, "Thanks for the Memory?"—Rob Little, Belleville, Ill.

● Shirley Ross and I sang "Thanks for the Memory" in the movie "The Big Broadcast of 1938." I liked it. It was identified with me and in time became my theme song.

FOR RANDOLPH W. THROWER,
Commissioner Internal Revenue Service

Is there any sane reason for a single person having to pay 40 percent more income tax than a married person with the same number of dependents?—Lawrence Crowder, Petersburg, Va.

● The income tax rates are fixed by Congress. When preferential rates for married persons filing a joint return were first enacted, the Congress did not intend to discriminate against single people. It intended to offset the favored tax treatment accorded married persons living in community property states. As part of the Tax Reform Act of 1969, Congress enacted new tax rates for single persons. Now their tax will not be more than 20 percent higher than the tax paid by married persons filing a joint return with the same taxable income.

FOR F. LEE BAILEY,
attorney

You have tried cases in military and civilian courts. Do you find civilian courts fairer? Do you feel your client, Capt. Ernest Medina, accused of murder at My Lai, will get a fair trial?—T. L. Nugent, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

● If I were accused of a crime, and if I were innocent and there were no public pressures from within or without of the military, I would rather stand trial before a military court. Military courts are efficient and just. Fewer innocent people are tried in military courts because of the screening process.

I felt there was a potential that the jury in the Medina case may be prejudiced by what higher-ups want. So I asked that it be selected from a pool of officers of somewhat the same age and experience as Captain Medina. Another stipulation was that the officers in the pool should be men who were out of the country at the time of the trial of Lt. William Calley.

FOR COLONEL ROBERT RHEAULT, former Commander of the Special Forces (Green Berets) in Vietnam.

After much good publicity, the Green Berets are in "the doghouse." Did you feel Robin Moore's book, "The Green Berets," helped or hurt the Special Forces? Also, how do you feel about the profit Sgt. Barry Sadler made on his hit record, "Ballad of the Green Berets?"—John Flanagan, Jackson, Miss.

● I am sure that Robin Moore considers himself a friend of the Special Forces. However, most of the people who were in the Special Forces thought the book did not give an accurate picture of our role. As for Barry Sadler, he fought with the Special Forces and was wounded. If anyone has to make money on the Forces, I'm just as happy it was someone like Barry.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE WILMER D. MIZELL,
North Carolina

Knowing your interest in Vietnam veterans, could you tell us the number of wheel-chair veterans in the United States?—Roscoe Brown Fisher, Advance, N.C.

● As of March 31, 1971, there were 743 of them.

FOR ZALMAN KING, actor

Had you done any previous acting before "The Young Lawyers?" Are you married?—Mrs. F. G., Brooklyn, N.Y.

● I appeared for the first time on stage in an off-Broadway production of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." I went to Hollywood in 1966 and immediately began appearing in films and in TV series. Since making "The Young Lawyers," I have starred in two major motion pictures—"The Ski Bum" and "You Gotta Walk It Like You Talk or You Lose the Beat." I am married to the former Patricia Knop and have two daughters, Chloe, four, and Gillian, two.

FOR TONY RANDALL,

costar on ABC-TV's "The Odd Couple"

Your costar, Jack Klugman, has stated that he is really as sloppy in real life as the character he portrays on the series. Would you admit to being as fastidious (fussy?) as Felix, the character you play?—M. Salter, Des Moines, Iowa

● No. I am an actor.

How to Lose up to 10 Pounds in only 10 days with Newest Grapefruit "Super-C" Diet

Delicious Vitamin Rich Diet flushes excess fat out of body...without drugs, pills, hateful exercises or nasty hunger pangs.

By Elizabeth Louise

Fort Lauderdale, Florida (Special Report) – From this fabulous Gold Coast City comes word of the latest, high-speed grapefruit reducing discovery. The "SUPER-C" Plan is new and different from other grapefruit diets. No long waiting. This one is so fast that it actually begins to work within 24 hours – even while you sleep! That's why you can reduce up to 10 pounds in only 10 days!

NO DRUGS . . . NO PILLS

No nauseating medicines. Not even vitamin capsules are required. You aren't forced to do tedious exercises that wear you out. Best of all, you'll never suffer from cruel starvation jitters. You can enjoy hundreds of delicious satisfying foods – rich in natural vitamins, body building proteins, farm fresh dairy products and grains. Plus choice tidbits–delicious, scrumptious snacks that really satisfy . . . eat all you want, day or night . . . with meals or after meals. Yet lose weight faster than you ever dreamed possible! Up to 10 full pounds (or more) in just 10 days! All this thanks to the new fast-acting "SUPER-C" Grapefruit Diet and Regimen. Supercharged with NATURAL VITAMIN "C" – the health ingredient acclaimed by doctors, dieticians and famous scientists all over the world. Yes! This grapefruit diet uses the right combination of foods to burn up accumulated body fat!

RESHAPES YOUR BODY

This sensational method really transforms your figure, day after day. And then, one morning, you wake up to find that your body is lean, lithe and limber again, as in years gone by. Yes! A slender more vigorous body – aglow with youthful sex appeal. This new strange regimen has worked wonders for thousands of men and women coast-to-coast. It can work wonders for you too, but there is a catch! You must like grapefruit (fresh or canned). You must follow the Special Private Instructions for 10 days. That's all! It's much easier than you think to get wonderful results! And, as it flushes fat out of your body, this great diet also helps you overcome that tired, sluggish 'old age' feeling due to overweight.

WHY STARVATION DIETS FAIL

Many faddish diets almost starve you to death. Such silly diets are against nature itself. That's why your body fights back. Pretty soon the unsightly fat returns – pound after pound. SUPER-C Grapefruit Diet is different. You're never starved. You don't skip a single meal. In fact, you get hearty breakfasts, lunches, dinners. You enjoy a rich variety of good eating – foods you've always craved for. Just imagine . . . now you can partake of spareribs, thick, juicy steaks, fried chicken, pork, bacon and eggs, and scores of other "prohibited" dishes. You actually fill up on lots of delicious foods. Yet, by using the right combination of foods you burn up accumulated fat fast! Right up to 10 pounds or more in only 10 days!

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Your body burns up fat much as a car motor burns fuel. But after years of faulty dieting, fats become hardened and lazy – locked up in body tissues. They may clog up arteries, placing life itself in jeopardy. The excess fat becomes stored in arms, thighs, buttocks, midriff, etc. You look older. You feel older. You act older.

ERASE OLD AGE LOOKS!

Genuine Super-C Diet/Regimen has been proven in thousands of cases. It unlocks those deep-stored fats. Like the spark plugs in your car, it ignites them, then metabolizes them right out of your body. And soon enough, the unsightly bulges and awkward pot belly vanish away. It's incredibly fast! No matter how overweight you are, you can actually lose up to 10 pounds or MORE, in 10 short days. Yes! Even if ordinary grapefruit diets failed before. Besides, this natural plan is 100% safe. It's fun. It's easy and economical to follow. No costly food fads. Everything you need is available in your own food market. No boring, muscle-twitching exercises. And no pills. No starvation diets ever. You eat your fill. Yet, strange, but true, you lose pound after pound – even though you gorge yourself on scrumptious foods! This new Super-C Diet/Regimen helps you feel younger . . . act younger . . . and regain that sparkling, youthful look of long ago.

KEEP IT OFF – ALL YEAR LONG!

This Diet Regimen, so rich in Vitamin C, will be mailed to all interested readers. Write today and also receive the Full Year Maintenance Plan – at no extra cost! Our Five Enduring Women:

Smith, Kennedy, Buckley, Luce, Mesta

These five remarkable women have made an enduring sort of history of their own, a secure bulwark against change and even death

These are the women who don't need a frenzied national movement to be "liberated," the elder stateswomen of America, all of them familiar faces and names on the national scene.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith is a 31-year veteran of both houses of Congress and the only woman among 99 men. Perle Mesta and Clare Luce have been respectively Minister to Luxembourg and Ambassador to Italy; and Mrs. Luce was also a Congresswoman. The other two, Mrs. Joseph Kennedy and Mrs. William F. Buckley (Sr.) are mothers of elected officials. Rose Kennedy, mother of eight, is the only woman in American history who has had three sons in national office at the same time—John in the White House, Bobby and Teddy in the Senate. And when her late husband was Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, she was the first lady of the American Embassy on London's Grosvenor Square. Aloise Buckley is the mother of James F. Buckley, Senator from New York, and of the Conservative movement's founder, William F. Buckley, Jr., Editor of The National Review, newspaper columnist and once candidate for Mayor of New York.

They are all plentifully endowed with good looks and brains; all are gracious hostesses and smart dressers. None is young in years any more, but all are regular dynamos when it comes to generating energy for their particular projects, families and friends.

All five women are widows; and they are all very, very rich, thanks to having had the foresight to marry men who were extremely successful. Only Mrs. Smith had a different legacy from her husband. She inherited the late Clyde H. Smith's following and was first elected to the House in 1940 to fill the vacancy he created. She earned her own money.

By Irene Corbally Kuhn

Sen. Smith: "Highly organized, makes a fetish of answering every letter and wire."

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith

Senator Smith is a lady of courage, consideration, convictions.

As to courage, there is her refusal to give up when she had first one, then another operation on two arthritic hips. The excruciating pain never stopped the lady from Maine. She went zipping around the Senate in a wheel chair for well over a year. On other occasions, she used a modified golf cart, gaily decorated and festooned. Now, with artificial hip joints, Margaret Smith gets around very well under her own power and swims daily in all seasons.

As for consideration, she is highly organized, makes a fetish of answering every letter and wire but keeps herself and her staff to a regular eight-thirty to five routine. She does not believe in working her staff overtime; the work gets done efficiently and on time. The Senator may take work home, but she does not expect her staff to do so.

And as for convictions, these are a legend on the Hill. When Maggie believes in something, she keeps her own counsel, sticks to her guns. On controversial bills, her vote is her secret until she casts it.

Music is the key to her friendship with Hildergarde, the charming blonde singer-pianist, as indestructible in her own way as the Senator. The two women have much in common. Both have solid American roots, the Senator's planted deep in Maine, Hildergarde's in the Middle West. Both have a beguiling quality which charms without cloying. And both women affect the same feminine trick of using a fresh rose as a signature. The Senator wears a bud in her buttonhole or on her blouse; Hildy holds a long-stemmed beauty in her hands as she sings.

Senator Smith holds 65 honorary degrees from colleges and universities, has been on the Gallup Poll's list of "most admired women in the world" nine times since 1954 and has received 51 national honors.

Mrs. Kennedy: "Even without the backing of Joe, she is determined to accomplish the impossible."

Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy

If ever a woman was trained to be an Elder Stateswoman it is Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy. She was educated in European convents and finishing schools, and even as a girl she spoke several languages. Her father, "Honey Fitz," was Mayor of Boston and a power in American-Irish politics. As the daughter, wife and mother of politicians, she is now, even without the backing of her late husband, Joe, determined to accomplish the impossible. She wants to be the only woman in United States history to see two sons elected to the Presidency.

At the age of 81, she is devoting most of her considerable energies —and is also prepared to spend her fortune—to put Teddy, the last of her four boys, into the White House. To her, as to their late father, Ambassador Joseph Kennedy, the Kennedy dynasty is an alive and continuing process.

A visitor once asked Rose how she felt about having another son jeopardize his life by running for President. Her reply: Would a royal family forfeit its right to the throne because one of its kings and one of its princes had fallen to murderous lunatics?

She is forever conscious of the Kennedy "image." She once said "emotionalism in front of people is a sign of immaturity." When her two murdered sons were buried, she steeled her will to maintain her tearless composure before the piercing, prying eyes of the TV cameras.

She is at home on the international political scene as much as in domestic politics. And her shrewdness and tact are legendary. (There was the time, for example, when Joe Kennedy's conversation was annoying Winston Churchill. Rose managed to change the subject so deftly that Churchill said of her later she'd have been better in the ambassadorial job than Kennedy.

Mrs. Buckley: "At 76, she is softly beautiful, stylish, warm and witty."

Aloise Buckley

To be an Elder Stateswoman to the young takes some doing. But not for Aloise Buckley, who brought up 10 children and can count 49 grandchildren, ranging in age from 26 down to three.

She has one truly remarkable quality—bringing out love and affection in children, and especially in her grandchildren. They turn to her first, rather than to their parents, and they write her about all their problems. She carries on a massive correspondence with them from primary school through college. To all of them, their grandmother is "groovy." And in this case the younger generation is absolutely right. At 76, Aloise Buckley is softly beautiful, stylish, warm and witty. "Fun to be with" is the okay the young put on her with unreserved approval and warm affection.

She was only 22 when she went from one world to another, from the quiet backwaters of her simple New Orleans family life to the rough life of the oil fields in Tampico, Mexico, as the bride of William F. Buckley. Diplomacy—which is what statesmanship is all about—came to her naturally. She dealt with Mexican bandits and with Texas outlaws who would do anything for money, from mayhem to murder. Still, she kept her cool. Two of her children were born in Mexico, and she had a third just as the Mexican adventure came to an end. In 1921 Buckley was expelled from the country, which was still in the throes of revolution and outlawry.

In the decades that followed, Aloise Buckley helped her husband to great financial success and shared with him the rearing and education of their 10 children. The Buckleys, like the Kennedys, have an Irish-Catholic heritage, and both have large families. The parents in both cases were ambitious for their children—still are. But, in the case of the Buckleys, it was for intellectual achievement and a well-rounded life of music, art, languages, travel. The Kennedys took the political road upon which the Buckleys are only now embarking.

Five Enduring Women

Mrs. Luce: "Many women in one, but she is primarily a doer, an achiever."

Mrs. Mesta: "Cool guests, cool music, hot food and a warm hostess" —her party recipe.

Clare Boothe Luce

Youngest of the elder stateswomen (together with Mrs. Smith), Clare Boothe Luce wears many becoming hats—including those of author, playwright, artist, actress, war correspondent, politician, diplomat and sportswoman. She is a real beauty, fragile-seeming and delicate, but "a rose in a steel vise" is the way one writer described her.

She is the friend of almost everyone worth knowing in our times. And—since she has a forceful, independent and strong character, with a wit as sharp as a stiletto—she has a few enemies.

Among these, count the erstwhile maverick Senator from Oregon, Wayne Morse. His vitriolic attacks on her in the Senate compromised her usefulness as the Ambassador to Brazil—an Eisenhower appointment which the Senate had overwhelmingly approved. She had earlier done a fine job as Ambassador to Rome.

Mrs. Luce resigned, but she had the last word against Morse. In a public statement she thanked the Senate for its overwhelming vote of confirmation and added: "My difficulties, of course, go some years back, beginning when Senator Wayne Morse was kicked in the head by a horse."

Born into a good family with no money, she married millionaire George Brokaw when she was 20. Their daughter, Anne, who was killed in a motor accident at 18, was her only child. She divorced Brokaw and, despite her beauty and charm, did not marry again for some years. Finally, in 1935, she became the wife of Henry R. Luce, founder of the Time-Life publishing empire. Their marriage lasted happily for 32 years, until Luce's death in 1967.

Clare Boothe Luce is many women in one, but she is primarily a doer, an achiever. She makes a success of everything to which she turns her hand and gives her heart.

Perle Mesta

The hostess with the mostest," at age 80, is still the party-givingest gal in Washington, where she lives in a luxurious penthouse atop the Sheraton Park Hotel. It has been a long trip from Oklahoma for Perle, born Pearl Shirvin, daughter of an oil pioneer. He gave his daughter a taste for politics and a lot of beautiful folding money. She used to go to Republican conventions with him until she married George Mesta, rich, handsome, self-made Italian-American machine-tool manufacturer. He took her to Democratic conventions and left her a fortune when he died in 1926. She has always used it well and generously.

Her friend President Harry Truman appointed her Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to tiny Luxembourg. This was the first time an American President had sent a full-time Minister to Luxembourg. And Perle Mesta was only the third woman in our history to hold a top-ranking diplomatic post.

Perle Mesta is unique in having inspired a successful musical, "Call Me Madam," with Ethel Merman belting out the lyrics. (Some say she was more like Perle than Perle herself.)

Her parties are fun. She can get anyone she wants to attend. The late Vice President Barkley used to dance soft-shoe numbers: General Eisenhower once sang "Home on the Range;" Harry Truman played the "Missouri Waltz" for her and her guests until even he must have been sick of it.

Although she lives in Washington and flits around the world, her official voting residence is Newport, R.I., where she still owns Mid-Cliffe, her first and only house.

Her never-fail good party recipe, she says, is cool guests, cool music, hot food and a warm hostess. And as one Washington news-hen sagely remarked, plenty of lettuce and a Vice President on ice helps. ◆

A New Approach to Back-Yard Hamburgers

Favorfully accented with tomato sauce and a sour cream-blue cheese topping, these scrumptious hamburgers will add extra spark to any picnic menu.

HAMBURGER CUPS

1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons dry sherry or vinegar
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg, slightly beaten
½ cup crumbs from flavored crackers (such as blue cheese, bacon, or onion)
1½ lbs. lean ground beef
½ cup dairy sour cream
Blue cheese, crumbled
Sliced green onions

1. Mix thoroughly in a bowl the tomato sauce, brown sugar, wine, Worcestershire sauce, prepared mustard, and salt.

2. Combine egg in a bowl with cracker crumbs, 2 tablespoons of the tomato sauce mixture, and the ground beef. Toss lightly and shape into six 1-in. thick patties.

3. Grill 5 in. from hot coals 10 min., basting frequently with tomato sauce mixture. Make a depression in each pattie using back of a spoon. Turn patties and grill about 10 min., basting with additional tomato sauce mixture.

4. To serve, arrange patties, depression side up, on heated platter and fill with the sour cream. Sprinkle with blue cheese and green onion. Spoon Buttered Mushrooms onto platter. Garnish with parsley sprigs. Accompany with Skewered Bread Chunks. 6 servings

BUTTERED MUSHROOMS

¾ lb. small fresh mushroom caps
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
Salt

1. Put mushrooms onto a large square of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Dot with butter or margarine and sprinkle with salt. Bring ends up and seal tightly, using a drugstore fold and sealing ends.

2. Set package on grill 5 in. from hot coals and cook 25 min., turning often. 6 servings

SKEWERED BREAD CHUNKS

½ cup butter or margarine, softened
1 or 2 cloves garlic, crushed in a garlic press
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 loaf unsliced French bread, cut in half lengthwise, then crosswise in 2-in. slices
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

1. Mix butter or margarine with garlic and parsley until blended. Spread generously on cut surfaces of bread slices and sprinkle with cheese. Thread onto skewers.

2. Grill 5 in. from hot coals about 5 min., or until lightly toasted and hot, turning frequently. 6 servings

LUSCIOUS FREEZE

2 cans (14 oz. each) sweetened condensed milk
2 bottles (28 oz. each) orange carbonated beverage, chilled
Chopped walnuts

1. Turn sweetened condensed milk into a large bowl. Add chilled carbonated beverage gradually, stirring until blended. Pour into refrigerator trays and freeze until almost firm.

2. Turn partially frozen mixture into chilled bowl; break up and beat with beater just until smooth. Immediately return to trays, sprinkle generously with nuts, and freeze.

Israel—Ascending Star on the World Fashion Scene

A lush textured wool dress, by Ero, features a skirt and banded sleeves with colors like delicate stained glass. Yemenite jewelry by Maskit.

Duo in suede: over pants, a long fitted vest, appliquéd in leather, and a striking knickers suit. Both from Beged-Or. Belt by Elanomi for Maskit.

A three-part drama in knit; striped battlejacket over a matching zip-up skirt and a bit of whimsy in hot pants to show or not. From Elanit.

Move over, Paris and Rome—the vibrations from another fashion center, Israel, are being soundly felt. Sight unseen, Israeli designs might conjure up such looks as the flowing burnoose (straight out of the Biblical past), the demure dress with elaborate Yemenite embroidery, or a Bedouin-inspired cape. All of these styles are in the country's current fashion vernacular. But—hot pants, knickers, long vests? Yes, believe it or not! In a country which boasts a population representing 70 cultures and 103 countries, the fashion direction continues to accelerate. Assembled here, the Israel fashion industry's latest offerings for fall—in suede, touches of leather, knitwear, and lush patterned wool. Available in U.S. stores this coming month.

THE DOCTOR LETS YOU IN
By Arthur S. Freese

Pierced Ears Can Be Dangerous

Girls and boys are piercing earlobes again. Hardly new. Babylonian men wore earrings to show rank, ancient Greeks had tinkling pendants, African maidens used pierced ears when seeking husbands. One New York jeweler claims he has pierced nearly half-a-million ears. But the simple operation can lead to serious infections.

Piercing's best done by a physician. First cleansing with antiseptic, doctors commonly use a large-gauge needle or special piercing instrument to painlessly make the hole slightly above the earlobe center. A 14-karat gold or sterling silver stud or loop is worn for a few weeks. But don't do it if you have the slightest trouble with your ears—cysts or acne or moles, metal allergies or any tendency to develop scar tissue.

PEOPLE AND YOU

Why Children Behave Better for Strangers

Parents have suspected it for generations. Now Stanford University research has confirmed it. "Your son is such a nice, well-behaved boy," one mother says to another after the children have visited each other. The first mother smiles, but wonders to herself, "Can she mean my Johnny—the same boy who's so terrible at home?" The Stanford study indicates that young children do react more obediently to other mothers than to their own. Working with four-year-old children, researchers noted that 44 of 52 children were less obedient to their own mothers. Why this should be true is something the scientists have not yet figured out. Perhaps, they suggest, "familiarity breeds contempt." Or perhaps children obey the strange parents through fear because the youngsters do not know exactly how the strangers may react to disobedience. Whatever the reason, it's good to know that when Johnny listens perfectly to the neighbor and less than perfectly to his mother, he's being absolutely normal!

HOUSEHINTS
By Lee Pettee

The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture warns: Always wash cutting boards with soap and water after use—particularly when preparing meats and poultry. Small, unseen bits of food imbedded in wood may bacterially contaminate the next foods you prepare on the board.

Candlewax on tablecloths or mats? Lift off what you can, or scrape carefully with dull knife. Place spot between two absorbent paper towels and use warm iron to melt wax. To remove dye from colored candle wax, use a pretreating compound such as Spray 'n Wash before laundering.

THE DIET WATCH
By Harriet La Barre

Advice to Tense Dieters

A dieter involved in a tense home or business situation often becomes terribly fatigued. One reason is that when you're tense, you use up energy faster than normal, and you actually need to eat more often.

Tests have revealed that a person under tension uses up energy so fast that low blood sugar appears about two and a half to three hours after his previous meal. He feels fatigued, his concentration suffers, he makes mistakes. So a quick snack is in order. If you run into lots of tense situations, you're smart to eat small meals often. Instead of three bigger meals a day, try switching to five miniature meals. Or cut down the size of your main meals and two or three snacks during the day. Yoghurt that contains fruit is a good choice for a snack or a glass of skimmed milk and a cracker or a frankfurter on a bun. So is any other food that has protein and carbohydrate to raise the blood sugar. But a container of black coffee is not a snack!

Cat-Care—When You're Not There

With the great popularity of cats comes —the professional cat sitter. For fees ranging from moderate to an inflated $3 an hour in Manhattan, sitters will come in twice a day to prepare gourmet meals, clean litter boxes and administer kibble and sympathy to lonely city cats while their owners are away.

Business is booming because most cats are uncooperative travelers and even worse boarders. They prefer to be left at home, even if alone, for long periods of time. If you can't afford a professional sitter, a helpful neighbor is often available for a modest fee. Some responsible children also have been known to take on the task, but better leave clear instructions—such as:

- Feed cat morning and night—½ small flat can each portion (3 oz.)
- Leave out a dish of dry cat food for snacking.
- Provide fresh water at all times.
- Clean litter box at least once a day, and don't forget to use soap and water before refilling.
- A little petting is much appreciated.

POSTMARKED moon!

A First Day Cover absolutely unprecedented in all stamp history!

This valuable commemorative envelope is cancelled with a unique Moon-Landing Postmark. Both stamp and postmark were created from dies carried to the Moon and back by our Apollo 11 Astronauts. The Cover features a century-old woodcut from Jules Verne's best-selling novel of 1869 predicting 3 Americans would be first to land on the moon. We are not taking orders for this sensational cover — we think it is priceless; but we'll give you one free of extra cost to introduce the exciting hobby of stamp collecting and our famous stamps-on-approval service. You get over 100 other stamps including spectacular Space issues-plus an illustrated Album — yours to keep as a bonus should you buy $1 worth from our approval selection. Or you can return album and stamps with selection and buy nothing. But in either case the "Postmarked Moon" Cover is yours to keep. Send 25c for postage and handling today while supplies last!

SYLVIA SIDNEY'S NEEDLEPOINT KITS

BY DOROTHY LAMBERT BRIGHTBILL

It's the greatest! Sylvia Sidney's needlepoint is like no other. It reflects the same dramatic impact, color and know-how that is apparent in Miss Sidney's personality. The designs are big, important and beautifully executed with a different twist to the background. After you have finished the intriguing motifs—the bright black-eyed Susan sporting a ladybug, the gay butterfly (both, as shown, made up as pillows, but you could frame them), and the framed dew-drop-jeweled rose (one of Miss Sidney's delightful "signatures")—you will find fascination in the unusual background stitches. Miss Sidney is seated on the stairway of her Connecticut country home working on her "Confetti" group, which includes a belt (on the newel post), pin cushion and doorstop or bookend (on bottom step), and an eyeglass case (not shown). As a plus, a sapphire blue geometric pillow (below newel post) is available. To order, use coupon.

Sylvia Sidney is a truly creative woman and her original creations show a knack of combining striking colors and an unusual but easy background

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Caused By Inflammation And Infection

Also Gives Prompt, Temporary Relief In Many Cases from Pain and Burning Itch in Such Tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make bowel movements more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

Robert Young: Wealthy, Relaxed and Piling up a New Fortune

Young and his wife Betty: His gravest concern about returning to TV was being away from her.

Once upon a time, Robert Young thought about retiring. But that was a long time ago. Today the star of ABC's "Marcus Welby, M.D." doesn't have time to think about it.

"When my four girls were little things, I bought a farm up in Carmel Valley," Bob—now 64—told me on the sun porch of his comfortable Beverly Hills home. "At the time, I thought maybe I'd retire there one day. I bought two cows and decided to raise hay and horses. Then I got the idea of turning it into an egg farm and moved in about

"I am a plodder. My career never had any great peaks. But producers and directors knew I was reliable. So when they couldn't get the really big stars, they'd say, 'Let's get Bob.' As a result, I always kept working, each time climbing a little higher."

5,000 hens. By the time I paid the vet fees and salaries for collecting and crating the eggs, at the end of the year I realized I could have made more money selling pencils on a street corner! So I put the farm up for sale."

But the farm was hardly a total flop. "I was making one or two pictures a year then, and in between we'd go up there and literally return to nature. The girls rode horses and had a marvelous time!"

Now, of course, by owning (with his friend and partner Eugene Rodney) all 207 segments of his highly successful "Father Knows Best" TV series (which is in its 21st year of reruns and syndication) millionaire Robert Young can buy anything his heart desires. He has a business manager to look after his investments and could retire without a worry in the world. But he goes on and on—and even owns a percentage of his new TV success, the Welby show. Bob's girls are married now, and Bob has five grandchildren.

Not all has been sweetness and light in Bob's life. In between his two TV series, there was a four-year period when he took time out to overcome his alcoholism. He hesitates to talk about it, not out of embarrassment but simply because it is a solved problem, and he feels discussing it stretches it out of proportion. Today he says, "I don't drink and neither does Betty."

It was the character of Marcus Welby that enticed Bob back into television. "When I read the script, I liked the reliability of the character. But I had to have time to think about it. Betty and I mulled it over for a week."

One of Bob's gravest concerns about accepting the role was the necessity to be at the studio all day while Betty, to whom he's been married 38 years, was left alone. They had grown accustomed to being together constantly. It was Betty who insisted he should consider it. "But she wanted to be sure I felt it was worth-while," said Bob. "By that she didn't mean financially, because after 'Father' there was no money worry. She just wanted to be sure I'd enjoy doing it."

Bob says he is enjoying life more than ever. But he is also working harder, because "Marcus Welby" is a full-hour show. As he explains it, "I don't have the tensions or the feeling of competition I once had."

Bob has been working since he was eight, as a newspaper boy, soda jerk, truck driver and clerk in a savings and loan. His father was a general contractor and was away for months at a time, building expositions. "We never had a father-son relationship, and it was up to my two brothers and me to bring in an income."

By the time Bob was in high school, his parents' marriage had dissolved, and he became a loner. "Not antisocial, but unsocial. The only thing I could do—unlike the athletic kids—was study. I was good at that. Never got anything below an A." Then an English teacher, affectionately called "Madre," made him into a stage manager at school, and that was all it took to point Robert Young toward a 41-year acting career—including over 100 movies.

Bob modestly calls himself a plodder. "My career never had any great peaks. But producers and directors knew I was reliable and dependable and that I'd put in a performance that wouldn't embarrass them. So when they couldn't get the really big stars, they'd say, 'Let's get Bob.' As a result, I always kept working, each time climbing a little higher."

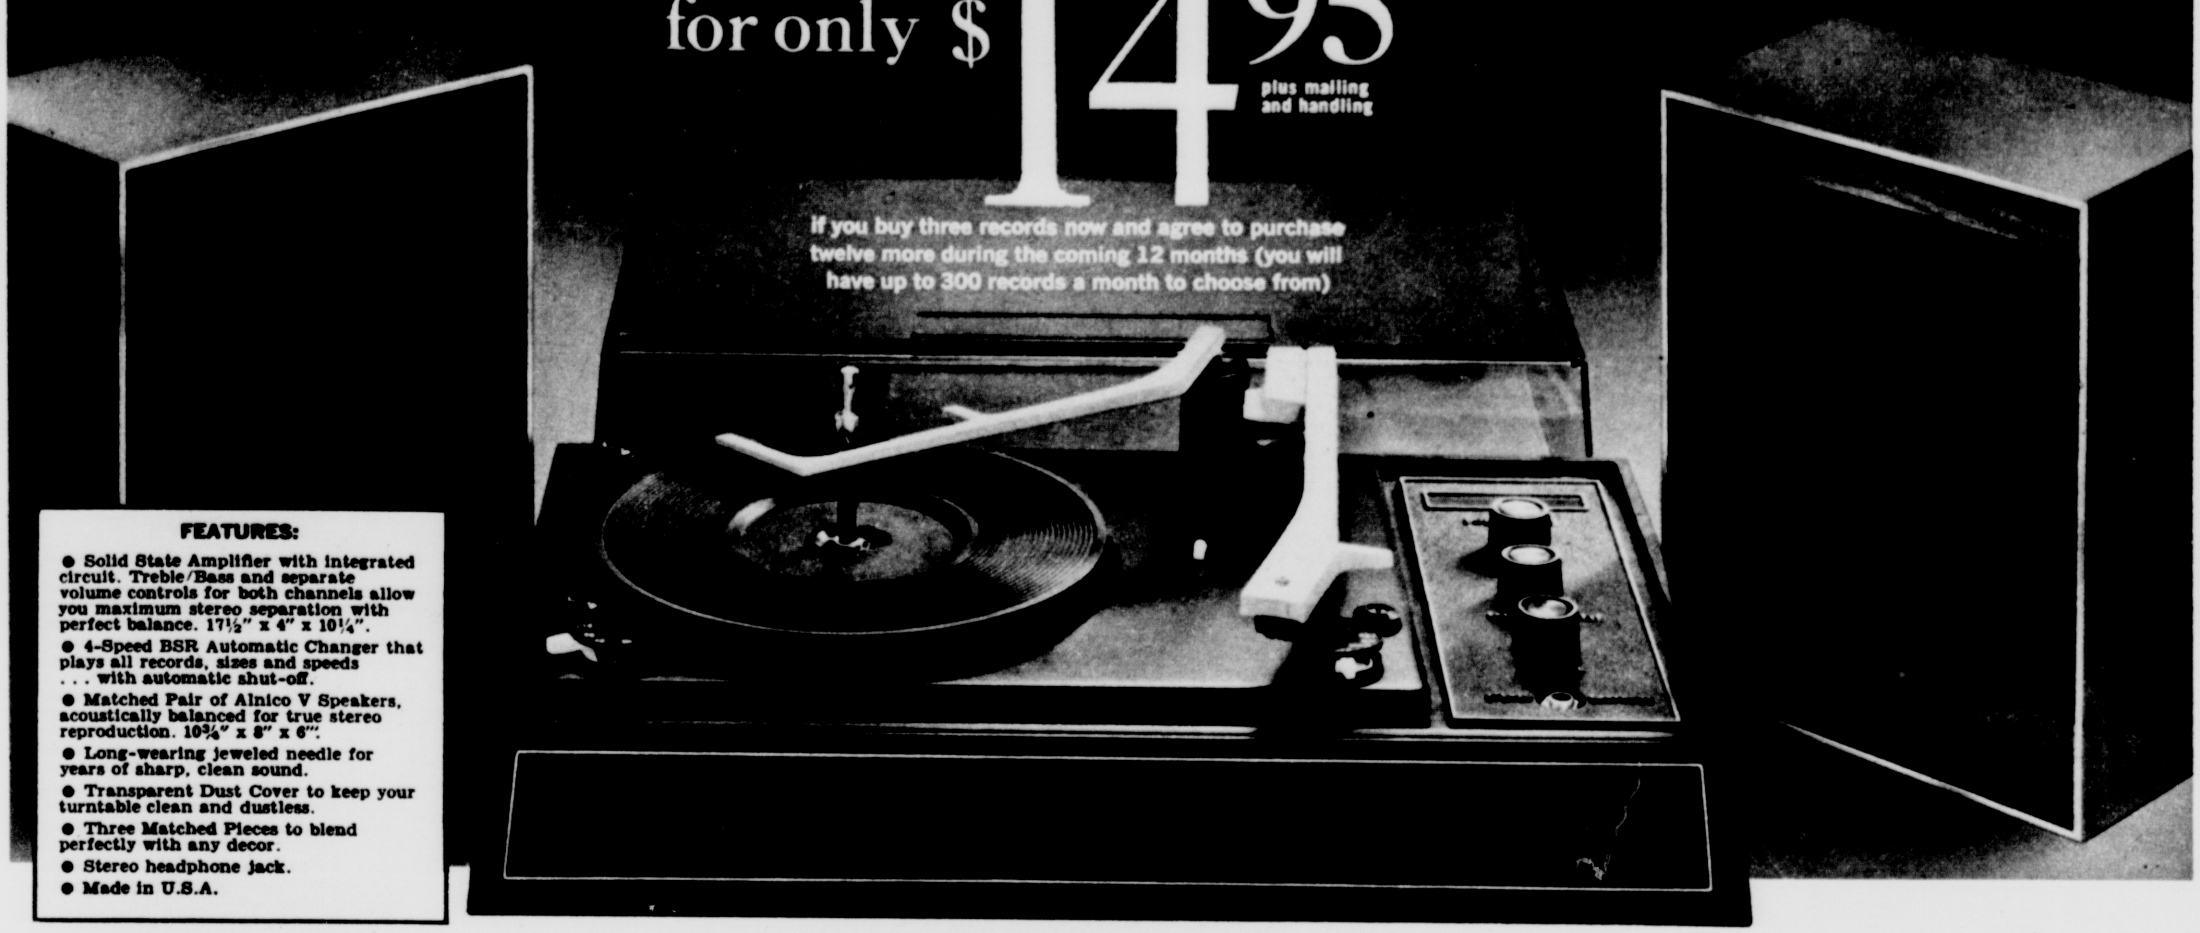

To say the least.

Does Bob think he'll really retire when his current series goes off—which, considering its ratings, seems years away? "Actually I think I'd like to do another series," he said! ◆

Actor Gene Wilder, 36, has startling green eyes and a thatch of red hair, and —he says—peace of mind. But does he? Right now, he's starring as the candy-maker in "Willie Wonka and the Chocolate Factory." But Gene well remembers being sent to military school in Hollywood, where he was "the only Jew in school and was either beaten up or insulted every day." He also says of his childhood: "I grew up constantly repressed because my mother was ill, and I was never allowed to scream or vent my anger openly. While hostility boiled inside me, I had to put on a normal, complacent front until I was a conflict of emotions." After seven years of analysis, Wilder says he is happy with both his career and his new wife, Mary Joe, whom he married in 1967. (His first marriage ended in divorce.) Now he is looking for "some corner of this world where love prevails and where the world can't catch up with me for 45 years—when I expect to be dead."

In these days of rising crime, picture 4,000 households with a grand total of only three burglaries since 1963. Then picture 7,000 neighboring homes with 1,800 burglaries in the same period. What were the 4,000 doing right? Participating in a plan called "Operation Identification," devised by the Police Chief of Monterey Park, Calif. All valuables were engraved—whether metal, glass, ceramic, plastic or wood—with an identifying number (the owner's driver's license number) and then registered with the police. Pasted around the entrances of participating homes were stickers announcing, "All items of value on these premises have been marked for ready identification by law-enforcement agencies." Since Monterey Park's success, the program has spread to 31 other California communities—and, just recently, to New Orleans.

SLEEPING ALOFT

travelers suffer when flying from one time zone to another. When you're exhausted from such a trip, what you need most is to "sleep for days," right? Wrong. According to the findings, as summarized in Pan Am's booklet, "Tips on Time," when you're home from the trip, "don't try to make up for lost sleep." This only exaggerates the problem. Instead, stick to your regular bedtime and getting-up time. Also, eat sensibly, relax and let your body clock reestablish its regular ticking with regular living. And as for all that sleep you're losing, try to get it on the plane.

I always took for granted
My line of ancestry;

A couple were discussing their finances and vacation hopes. "I've got good news, dear," said the husband. "I've saved enough for us to go to Europe."

"Oh, wonderful," exclaimed the wife. "When do we start?"

"As soon as I've saved enough for us to come back," he replied.

It happened in New York City: A car with Michigan license plates stopped, and the driver leaned out to speak with a man he saw standing on the curb.

"Could you please tell me how to get to Park Avenue?" the driver asked.

The New Yorker glowered. "I'm a pedestrian," he said, "I don't help automobiles!" —Dan Bennett

THE SHOWER PROBLEM
I've got the shower problem solved,
And all the stress that it involved
By being first so scalding hot
That I leapt yelping from the spot;
And then, adjusted, chilled my blood
By pouring down a freezing flood.
I'm sitting pretty as I scrub—
I've switched my bathing to the tub.

The family was entertaining a woman visiting from out of town. When she learned that their 18-year-old daughter was in love with a local boy, and that she was expecting to become engaged, the woman turned to the teen-ager's 10-year-old sister and jokingly asked: "Tell me, Peggy, have you ever been in love?"

The little girl meditated a moment, then in all seriousness, replied: "No, ma'am, but I've been in like."

LET ZANE GREY TAKE YOU OUT OF THE WORLD YOU'RE IN

Pick up a Zane Grey book and step into another world.

It's a world where the Plains Indians, the world's greatest horsemen, once more don their war paint to hunt scalps. And thin-lipped, soft-spoken men, squinting against the sun, carve out their destinies . . . on their own terms.

Riders of the Purple Sage, perhaps the most popular Western ever written. Against a background of fiery action, a mysterious rider and the girl he loves gamble their lives in the winning of the West.

Wild Horse Mesa, a western "Moby Dick," that portrays a man's desperate search for the King of the Horses.

These handsome, hardbound books are clothed in sunset red, desert tan and cavalry blue, and stamped in genuine gold. They're the first of what could be a library of Western classics you'll be proud to own.

You may wonder why we offer you three Zane Grey books (which are regularly $10.17) for only $1.

It's simply this. We think you'll be impressed. And that you'll want to own others in the series as they become available.

They will include: Wildfire, The Thundering Herd, The Vanishing American, Fighting Caravans, The Hash Knife Outfit, Maverick Queen, Thunder Mountain, and many more.

Because we print in large quantities, and because we sell directly to the public, we can offer our subscribers beautifully bound Zane Grey books for only a fraction of what you'd expect to pay—only $3.39 plus a few cents shipping for each volume.

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

TERRY DEGRACE, TORRANCE, CA., ASKS: "WHY DO DOGS BURY BONES?"

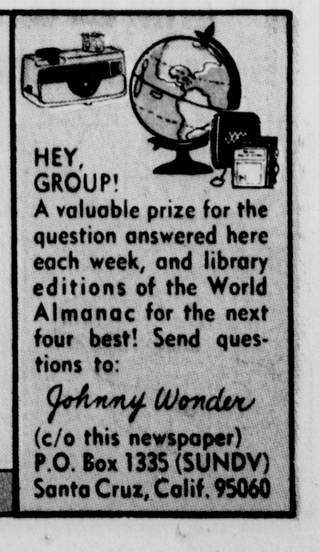

JOHNNY'S MAIL BOX

DOGS BURY BONES BECAUSE OF AN INSTINCT THAT IS THOUSANDS OF YEARS OLD... WHEN YOUR DOG'S ANCESTORS HAD NO KIND MASTERS TO FEED THEM. WHAT FOOD THEY COULDN'T FINISH EATING IN A MEAL, THEY WOULD SAVE FOR A FUTURE MEAL...

... BY BURYING THE BONE, A DOG COULD HIDE IT FROM OTHER ANIMALS. YOUR WELL-FED PET TODAY MAY NOT NEED TO WORRY ABOUT HIS NEXT MEAL, BUT HE STILL OBEYS HIS AGES-OLD HABIT.

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR POLLY—While painting the children's bedrooms I accidentally discovered that latex paint will remove ball point pen marks on the walls. I had painted over such marks and they showed through, so I quickly grabbed a cloth and wiped away the paint before it dried. The pen marks came off with the wet paint!—MRS. J. R. W.

DEAR POLLY—Do not throw away no-longer-needed coffee cup racks with hooks on them—use in the work shop or garage for hanging small tools. They are also good to use in the broom closet for hanging many things.—M. B.

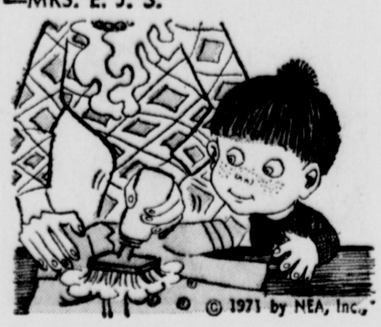

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, c/o this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY—This simple pointer prevents a lot of frustration when trying to rewind a window shade. When rewinding the roller with my fingers it always slipped, but now I take an old fork, slip the little end piece between the tines of the fork and then twist the fork until the spring is as tight as necessary.—ERMA

DEAR POLLY—To curl fake eye lashes, dip them in warm water, place between two pieces of clear plastic wrap and roll around a pencil. Secure with a rubber band till lashes are dry.—JEANNIE

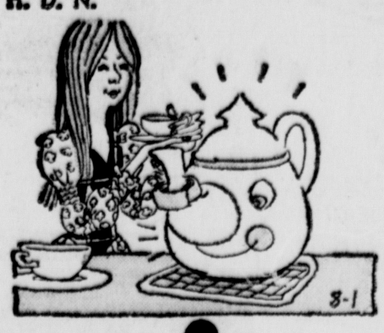

DEAR POLLY—I wanted curtains to match the new bedspreads for my daughter's bedroom. The matching curtains cost twice as much as a spread, so I bought another bedspread and made matching curtains.—MRS. M. R. D.

DEAR POLLY—One Sunday, when my son was ready to put on his coat, I noticed several grease and mud spots on one side and the sleeve. Not having any cleaning fluid I tried my foam-type rug and upholstery cleaner. It not only removed the spots, but did not leave the coat damp or with an odor. —MRS. E. J. S.

DEAR POLLY—I often had trouble with the end of plastic gummed tape sticking to the roll. Now I slip the core of the roll on the spout of my warm tea kettle, leave it for a while and then have no trouble finding the end.—MRS. H. D. N.

DEAR POLLY—A pronged hair lift, with three to seven prongs, is excellent for releasing the tangles from hair that has been teased. Do this before a shampoo: Divide the hair into individual strands, work from the end of each strand up to the scalp until you have gone all through your hair. This saves time and does not hurt the hair.—ETHEL

DEAR POLLY—I use a pastry brush when cleaning an ash tray that has crevices in it. A swish with this brush and the ash tray is clean in seconds.—DEBBIE

DEAR POLLY—Assembling one's own first aid kit for the car is often far more satisfactory than buying one as they often do not have everything you want. Use a sturdy box, and stock with bandages, gauze, adhesive, aspirin, a big piece of white material, peroxide, a tube of ointment and anything else you think might be needed.—CONNIE

Slim Knit

Knit in stockinette stitch and trimmed with crocheted braid. A lovely dress. No. 2634 has knit directions for Sizes 8-20 inclusive.

THERE'LL BE A FULL MOON THIS WEEK, AND I INTEND TO OBSERVE!

YEAH. I SAW SOME PICTURES TAKEN ON THE RECENT SPACE SHOT. BOY!

YAS, YAS. INCREDIBLE, OF COURSE, BUT--KAFF-KAFF-- SOME THINGS ARE CONSTANT...

AND DON'T FORGET GOOD OLD KENTUCKY MOONSHINE!
